THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Vol. XLVIII.—No. 138.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1915.

Daily and Sunday, carrier delivery, 15 cents weekly. Single copies on the streets and at news-stands 5 cents.

ATLANTA'S MILITARY SEEKING RECRUITS

Officers of Fifth Regiment Taking Steps to Interest Business Men in Military Affairs.

The military of Atlanta is taking a new life, according to reports from the officers of the Fifth Regiment of the national guard of Georgia.

An appeal is to be made to the business men of the city to help the regiment secure recruits at once, as some of the companies are short of a full complement of men. It is believed that in this way a number of young men will readily enlist.

A drum and bugle corps is being organized to be composed of twelve drummers and an equal number of buglers. The bugles were already owned by the regiment, and the drums have been bought from the Knights of Khorassan. The boys will be trained by "Bob" Lawless, the well-known fireman, who is said to be an expert in that line.

Elimination Drill November 8. On Monday, November 8, there will be an elimination drill at the Auditorium, in which all the companies will drill in public to decide which is the best to compete with the company which is now the champion.

On November 17 there will be a prize drill between the champion company and the company that wins in the elimination drill. To this the public will also be invited.

As an evidence that the Fifth Regiment is getting on a better and more satisfactory basis it is pointed out that one officer has advanced the money with which to pay the men who were left during the call before Governor Staton retired from office. This amounted to between $2,500 and $3,000. The state will eventually pay the bill, but the officers thought the men had waited long enough.

Dr. E. J. Sprattling has stood the examination and been elected captain of the "Fifth Blues."

EDITOR HERRING WILL HAVE ESCORT ON TRIP TO MACON

Tifton, Ga., October 30.—(Special.)—There will doubtless be many editors at the state fair in Macon next Wednesday on Editors' day, but there will not be one among them who is prouder of his home town and who goes with stronger heart than his fellow citizens than Editor J. L. Herring, of the Tifton Gazette. At a mass meeting at the Tifton courthouse last night the following resolution was passed unanimously: "Be it resolved, That every automobile owner in Tifton and Tift county be asked to join in a parade for the Twenty day at the state fair on next Tuesday, November 2, and that the parade of this event will be to escort Editor John L. Herring, of the Tifton Gazette, to the meeting of the Georgia Editors, to be held on the following day, and that the occasion be in recognition of Editor Herring's long and useful service in promoting the best interests of Tifton, Tift county and south Georgia."

GALA WEEK IN ELBERTON. Aviators, Parade, Baby Parade and Other Features.

Elberton, Ga., October 30.—(Special.)—Monday opens gala week in Elberton, created by the business men of the town. It will be opened by a huge auto parade, a $50 prize being offered for the best decorated car. There will be a regular carnival with its midway during the entire week, but Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will be aviation days. The aviators will arrange a sort and drop bombs in it. A parade of babies in carriages will be one of the features, a prize being offered for the best decorated carriage. The business men of Elberton are pleased the week and propose to celebrate the return of prosperity. The exhibits at the recent rural school fair at Farmers academy will be displayed, and other exhibits had. The week promises great amusement, pleasure and profit to all.

ANTI-ILLITERACY FIGHT IN TIFT PROGRESSING

Tifton, Ga., October 30.—(Special.)—The purpose of stamping out illiteracy in Tift county was held in the Tift county courthouse today. Superintendent Fort E. Land and Superintendent Kersey have spent the week on a visit to all the schools in the county, and the meeting today was for purpose of consolidating data collected by the teachers. It was necessary that this data be collected before campaign could be outlined.

CHARGED WITH RUNNING STILL IN WARE COUNTY

Waycross, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—Charles, with operating a distillery without a license, a white man and 2 W. Lingerfelt was arrested at Waycross, Ga., of Waycross in and placed under bond pending a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Herbert W. Wilk Friday, November 5. This is the "last case" case that has been in Ware county in this year.

Dr. Hall Returns.

Dr. J. J. Hall, secretary Georgia Medical Society, had just returned from North Carolina, where he made several addresses, visiting Guilford, Guilford, Raleigh and Elizabeth City. He was having had very large success.

A sale of $3.75 values in finest imported broadcloths $2.50 yd.

Prices tomorrow, only $13.50 to $28.50
You will never see them again at the price. A saving to you of fully 40%.

Chateau gloves

These great sales of ours bring values you'd sincerely hope for. Every needed size and style, in this famous glove, will be shown this week. Soft, pliable, reliable and dressy. No other glove is known hereabouts that can take its place for. $1.50

Broadcloths

At a special price

a $3.75 value at $2.50 a yd.

We have just gotten through 51 pieces of finest foreign broadcloths, chiffon weight, satin finish, in twelve popular shades and black. The orders for these were given a year since, and, but for that fact, would be compelled to charge you $3.75 a yard. Tomorrow a great showing at $2.50.

KEELY COMPANY

November silk attractions

Now for the November business in silks

The silk business done here, this fall, has reached a very high water mark. Never in our history have we sold so many silks as in the October just past. These record-breaking sales are due to thoroughness in preparation—forethoughtfulness in selection and unquestioned values.

We are proud to say that the silk department has the ability to present the right things at the right price. Months of preparation has placed us in a position to command the November Silk sales in this section. We start tomorrow, the first week in November, by presenting:—

- | | |

New mid-autumn suits just arrived

A showing tomorrow of suits of great distinction. Our buyer has just returned from New York, with probably 200 fine suits, ranging in price from $35 to $100.

Scarcely any two suits are alike. Each suit and each model was carefully selected, is of the newest fashion and embodies all of the new Paris ideas, such as ripple coats, flare skirts, and many Russian styles.

Nearly every suit has bands of fur on the collar and cuffs, many having skirts fur trimmed. All are fancy, and the coats are lined with fancy silks.

In the assortment are several of the new military braided effects. This luxurious collection holds all of the wealth of style for this winter. Every idea that has been evolved by the style wizards is here represented.

Materials are various—the handsomest models include doe skin broadcloths, satin cloths, imported whipcords, French poplins, fine serges and gabardines.

Every rich new autumn color is represented. All sizes ladies' and misses.

$35---$40---$50---$60---$75---$100

Table linens

As Thanksgiving approaches every good housewife replenishes her linen closet. For the thirty past years we have been furnishing Thanksgiving linens hereabouts.

This is the time to purchase table linens needed, in extra heavy bleached qualities. In German, Scotch, French and Irish linens 68 to 90 inches wide, in every good grade, from 59c to $2.50 yd.

Mid-autumn dress woollens

Our dress goods business here is a surprise to the trade, a satisfaction to the customers, and a pleasure for ourselves.

From opening to closing time our dress goods staff is busy cutting off stylish, desirable and scarce dress woollens at prices unmatchable elsewhere.

One of the fundamentals of this great business is its thorough dress goods preparedness for all calls every season.

Everything that is new, everything that is scarce, everything that is hard to get will be found here tomorrow in all of the wanted colors at prices which you pay for substitutes elsewhere.

Don't fail to see the $3.75 value imported broadcloth at $2.50

New boots

Three new specials in extreme styles, shown here tomorrow. Button and laced glazed kid, mezzo calf and patent quarters, stitched in white, welted soles, with Louis leather heels. These are the styles for which best dressers are calling: $6.00 pair

A great showing of Georgette crepes

Right at the moment, when the fashion lovers are clamoring for Georgettes, and the manufacturers are cancelling orders for Georgettes, and the commission men are withdrawing prices on Georgettes, we are showing them in bewildering assortments and varieties. All the scarce colors—blues, black, taupe, afrie, hunter, mole, Russian, beaver, castor, midnight blue—are here. Also a strong line of evening shades. Our orders were placed early and our goods are now in the house.

Other people are asking $1.75 to $2.00 for them in limited quantities, but you will see these in great abundance here at $1.50

ROMANIANS ARE BENT ON FIGHTING TEUTONS

Demonstrations Arranged to Force Government to Declare for the Allies.

Paris, October 30.—Reports from Bucharest say that the demonstration there last Sunday in favor of the allies, which resulted in collision between the police and the manifestants, is to be followed by a similar affair tomorrow. A Bucharest dispatch to The Courrier Della Sera, of Milan, as forwarded to The Journal Des Debats, of Paris, says that tomorrow's demonstration, which has been arranged by the nationalists, "will be the last constitutional effort to induce the government to take part in the war."

The Bucharest police are taking extraordinary measures to preserve order. It is said in political circles at Bucharest, according to the dispatch, that if disturbances occur the Rumanian government will proclaim martial law.

Athens, October 30.—(Via London.)—The favorable attitude which Rumania is reported to have adopted toward the entente powers is engaging the close attention of the Greek government and general staff. A definite outcome of the negotiations of the allies at Bucharest is awaited anxiously.

LINER HESPERIAN SUNK BY GERMAN SUBMARINE

Washington Convinced Vessel Was Torpedoed Despite Berlin's Denial.

Washington, October 30.—While the report of the navy department which found that the fragment of metal forwarded from London as evidence in the case of the steamer Hesperian was part of a torpedo will be forwarded to the Berlin foreign office as a matter of information, it will not be accompanied by any representations by the United States. A link is missing in the chain of evidence upon which the Washington government could found a statement that it was convinced that a torpedo sent the ship to the bottom.

The fragment was turned over to Ambassador Paley by the British admiralty with the statement that it was found on the Hesperian's deck after the explosion. No sworn statement by the finder, however, was furnished, and until that gap is filled it was indicated today that no representations would be made to Germany, which has consistently maintained that the steamer was not torpedoed by a German submarine.

Germany has made to the United States a qualified disclaimer of responsibility for the sinking of the Hesperian. In a note to Ambassador Gerard on September 14, the foreign office said that on the face of the evidence then at hand, Germany was not satisfied that the Hesperian was not sunk by a German submarine.

The fragment of metal examined by the navy department experts was said to have been picked from the deck of the Hesperian after the explosion. The Hesperian sank early in September off the Irish coast while making her way to port after being disabled by the explosion. The fragment was made of polished steel, and was about nine inches long. It was sent to the state department by the American embassy at London.

The state department has been in doubt regarding the direct cause of the sinking of the Hesperian. A number of affidavits from passengers and officers of the ship have been received. The affiants swore that the ship had been torpedoed. The fragment metal was sent along as proof that the statements in the affidavits were true.

The position of the United States has been to take no steps to question the good faith of Germany's statements unless it was shown clearly that the sinking was in violation of them. The president and secretary of state have been reluctant to believe that the Hesperian was sunk deliberately without valid excuse.

White Plains, N. Y., October 30.—The unmarried children of Robert B. Ward, the Federal league baseball magnate, who died at New Rochelle October 15, are to receive twice as much as those who have married, under the terms of his will admitted to probate today.

About one-half of the estate, estimated at $5,000,000, is to be divided among the nine children. One-half of the estate is left outright to Mrs. Mary C. Ward, the widow, three-sixths to be divided among charitable organizations to be designated by her, and the remainder goes to the children.

GERMANS USE CATCH OF BELGIANS

Nine Persons Convicted of Espionage Killed and Ten Others Sentenced to Prison—Three Women in List.

London, October 30.—Nine persons, convicted October 25 of espionage in Belgium, were executed yesterday, according to Reuters' Amsterdam correspondent, who says this information was received in an official telegram from Berlin.

Ten other persons, including three women, were sentenced to penal servitude, it is stated.

The correspondent's dispatch follows: "An official telegram from Berlin states that in the last few days two additional important espionage cases have been detected in Belgium and northern France. In Belgium twenty-one persons have been arrested. It is alleged that after having confined their energies for some months to obtaining news by espionage and sending it to France by means of Holland, they became located in September, planning to dynamite railways and bridges, besides assisting persons of military use to escape from Belgium and France. Among those arrested are four women. The principal charges against them being that they were endangering the safety of German armies."

"The espionage system reported to have been discovered in France is alleged to have been managed by the wife of a French officer. It is charged that she received her instructions directly from the German minister in Paris. Two other women also are under arrest and according to Berlin, to the extent to which the system of espionage organized indicated the fact that the arrested persons figure prominently in the French secret service list."

The guilt of the accused, it is stated, already has been established. "Nine persons, the message adds, were tried for espionage in Belgium on October 25. All were found guilty and were sentenced to death. Ten persons were executed yesterday. Ten others, including three women, were sentenced to penal servitude."

GERARD REPORTS ON EXECUTIONS.

Washington, October 30.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin has transmitted to the state department a report received from the German foreign office which states that no Belgians have been condemned to death recently at Liege, and that the Belgian government was in error in its report to that effect. The ambassador's inquiry was made at the instance of the Belgian minister here, and he was instructed to use good offices in behalf of about thirty Belgians reported to be under sentence of death at Liege. The matter came up some days ago in a request to the execution in Belgium of the English nurse, Edith Cavell.

The executions reported tonight in advice from Amsterdam, it was believed, had no connection with the report as to the thirty sentences imposed at Liege.

Long Lost Brother Is Sought by Sister At Federal Prison

Sorrowing Woman, With Hope and Dread in Her Heart, Searches Faces of Over 800 Men.

Slowly ebbing hope was written in the eyes of the young woman who appeared at federal prison and asked for Warden Fred Zerbst. She carried a bundle of worn and faded photographs. She was ill at ease as she sat in the corridor and waited to be ushered into the warden's office.

"I am searching for a brother who disappeared six years ago," she told Warden Zerbst. "I thought he might be out here—under a different name. He was proud, and if he got into trouble he would discard his identity."

She undid the bundle of photographs. They showed the signs of much usage, as though they had been carried about a lot. Her fingers had, no doubt, undone the bundle a thousand times before.

The pictures showed a young man with distinct, well-shaped features, as though he might have come of a family proud of its ancestry and fond of family traditions. You would have associated him with a home filled with belongings, family relics, ancestral photographs and antique furniture.

Her Last Hope. "I have come here as a last resort," she explained to the warden. "For a year now I have been putting it off, expecting that he would return before I had to look for him in the prison."

"He was proud—oh, so proud—a little too proud. I'm afraid, for the comfort of his family, who would give all they possess to know where he is. Six years ago he failed to return one night after work. The police hunted everywhere for him."

"We have never heard a word from him. For six years I have corresponded with states and cities all over the country—to no avail."

"It has taken me six years to bring myself to even suspect that he might have got into trouble and is serving a prison sentence. Will you please take these photographs and see if there is anyone in your prison resembling him?"

The warden carried the pictures into the Berlin branch, where he and his assistants went over the huge array of photographs. No resemblance could be found.

When he returned to the woman in his office she was sitting before a window, a moist handkerchief crumpled in her hands, her eyes dewy and voice tremulous.

"I can't find any resemblance," said Warden Zerbst. "But I will be glad to have you go through the prison and see if you can find anyone who might be your brother."

Reluctantly, as though she would be disappointed, even though she discovered the missing one back in the depths of the great prison, she followed a uniformed guard on a tour of inspection that took in every face of the 800 gray-clad inmates.

But in no hour, when she emerged, there was a shadow of joy in her sorrowing eyes, as if she was glad, even though she had searched for six empty years, she hadn't found him—there.

Yellow Jackets' Snork A Little Real Football And Trim the Tar Heels

Puzzling Attack Baffles Carolina and Local Eleven Is Returned 23 to 3 Victor—Game Fiercely Fought. Brilliant Runs by Strupper and Fielder Thrill the Big Crowd—Carolina Never Made First Down.

By Dick Jemison.

The Tech Yellow Jackets gave the North Carolina Tar Heels a good drubbing Saturday afternoon, doing better than their most optimistic supporters hoped for by piling up a 23-to-3 count. The Tar Heels, who were the second-quarter team when Center Tandy kicked the 35-yard line and the Tech Yellow Jackets took the field, were never in danger of a touchdown, and were never in danger of a field goal.

The Tar Heels failed to show the length of the eleven that gave Georgia a good drubbing down here a year ago. In this eleven that was expected to give Virginia a beating, the Tar Heels were not better than a one-way team. They were never in danger of a touchdown, and were never in danger of a field goal.

The game was fiercely fought, but the Tar Heels were never in danger of a touchdown, and were never in danger of a field goal. The game was fiercely fought, but the Tar Heels were never in danger of a touchdown, and were never in danger of a field goal.

Birmingham, Ala., October 30.—(Special.)—For the first time in eight years the University of Alabama defeated the Georgia Tech football team. The score was 23 to 3. The Tigers, who were the first team to defeat the Tech since 1907, won the game by a score of 23 to 3.

The great Crimson team kicked the first goal in the game. The Tech's first goal was scored by Paddock, who kicked a 35-yard field goal. The game was a close one, with the Tech leading 13 to 0 at halftime.

Alabama's defense was superb, stopping the Tech's offense at every turn. The Tech's offense, however, was able to score in the second half. The game was a tactical battle, with both teams showing their strengths.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.

The opening of the fall season marked by the Halloween ball at the Piedmont Driving club Friday night and followed by the Harvest ball at the East Lake club Saturday night assembled "society" in two brilliant parties and costumes more numerous and more varied than ever that Atlanta women are as handsome as any in the South and know, too, the art of pretty toils.

The present modes, which borrow from picturesque old fashions and still adapt themselves to present tastes and standards, are extremely pretty, and, therefore, the present modes are costume themselves with more individuality than fashion has permitted for many years.

The black evening gown continues a favorite and there is nothing in which a good looking woman is more distinctive.

CHARMING VISITORS.

Strikingly handsome in a black tulle and sequin gown at the Halloween ball was Mrs. William Marshall, wife of General Marshall, of Washington, D. C., who is receiving these attentions which always come to her on her visits home. As Miss Linné Colquhoun, she was beautiful, and beloved, and smiling during her regime in the State and United States senate. She was the guest of honor in the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, the latter her youngest sister. In the party were her sisters, Mrs. George Howard and Mrs. Harriet Colquhoun and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell.

Mrs. Cora Harris was the recipient of many attentions and wore a Parisian toilet of plum-colored silk, the corsage adorned by lace and chiffon.

Mrs. William T. Newman was a stately figure in her black chiffon and lace gown. Mrs. Bush of Mobile, who was Miss Antonette Broughton, of Madison, Ga., was also in black tulle, showing the favor for full skirts with trailing lines of sparkling jet beads and sequins.

BLACK EVENING GOWNS.

Mrs. J. B. Howe wore a ball gown of black tulle and lace with French trimmings in jet. Mrs. William Spear, of Atlanta, wore a black tulle gown with a full skirt and a long train.

mind, and the impression fresh of gowns made in Gotham's most expensive shops, it was interesting to note that Atlanta's shops have more than kept up with the standards of fashion. Finished for an Atlanta belle this week were three most attractive gowns. One, an evening gown of cream raspberry tulle, was made in a succession of draperies, the tulle edges finished by a silver metal braid of delicate pattern. The close fitting corse was in folds of tulle and French finish was given in clusters of tiny flowers set in metal petals. A black evening gown in tulle was light and airy and suggestive of youth and grace. An afternoon gown was a French creation in blue chiffon and velvet made over white satin.

Illustrating the beauty of the satin tulle striped in metal was one of king's blue striped in silver. The skirt opened on the side to show a floated skirt in lace threaded in silver, and the corse was almost entirely of the lace.

A calling gown in black velvet showed the style of the Russian blouse coat. The circular skirt was plain and the coat was edged with fur; the collar and cuffs of the same. Showing the inspiration of old pictures was in fashioning new gowns was a pale blue evening gown draped on each side with pink rosebuds and showing the lace petticoat underneath. The corse of the silk was finished with silver lace.

A black and white evening gown skillfully combined black and white colored satin gown, with draperies of tulle skirt in black full over one showing a band of sequins underneath. It was edged with a dainty embroidery of

ATTRACTIVE GUESTS.

W. T. Mallison, United States navy, and his bride, who was Miss May Warner, of Nashville, were at the Georgian Terrace on route to Pensacola, Fla., where he will be temporarily stationed. Their wedding was a brilliant social event in Nashville of yesterday afternoon, and they are receiving charming attentions from friends in Atlanta. Mr. Mallison is a blonde beauty of stately type.

Mrs. James Kirkland, the wife of Chancellor James Kirkland, of Vanderbilt university, arrives in the city as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Sanders McDaniel.

SILVER WEDDING.

A distinguished occasion in Alabama society was the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Farley, which they celebrated in Montgomery last night at their handsome home in that city.

Mrs. Farley was Miss Jean Means, daughter of the late Thomas A. Means, of Alabama, and granddaughter of the late Alexander Means, who was the first president of the college now Emory university. Mrs. Farley was assisted in receiving by her daughter, Miss Lettie Allen Farley, and by her sister, the beautiful Mrs. Robert Logan, of Montgomery.

J. P. ALLEN & CO Suit and Coat Fashions Are Loveliest in Many Seasons—Fur An Appreciative Feature

Suits of Worth, Fineness $29.75 and Exacting Good Taste
Values $35, $37.50 and $40

To say that skirts flare and coats are many lengths is a mere summary of the season's styles. To see them all is to realize just how vague this announcement may be. Though the full gored skirt prevails, it would seem there are no two alike, and each simple model carries its own excuse for elegance. Coats may mean short and jaunty military lines or the more dressy Russian models of greater length and belted.

Fur Trimmings—Of Course

Every woman has her moment of rejoicing when she puts on a fur-trimmed garment. Becomingness, youthfulness and elegance immediately enter the atmosphere of her world.

Every suit of this lot is fur-trimmed—unless you want it plain tailored and severe. (We can show that, too.)

Materials are broadcloth, gabardine, serge and some smart novelty mixtures. So great is our preparation of suits at this popular price that one could scarcely miss the suit of her choice—in cloth, color or style, nor fail to appraise its value at a figure far greater than the present marking—$29.75.

Dress Coats of Seal—Plush Street Coats—Limosine Coats

The garment that is fur-trimmed and flared has surmounted all other coat ideals.

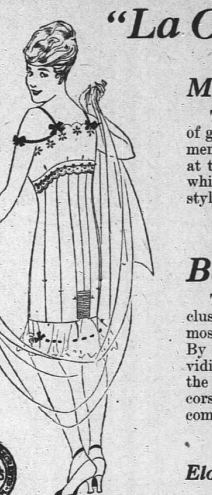

Seal Plush—The famous Seal Suits—are long and flared and have fur borders at neck and hand and hem. They are full satin lined and belted in back or all around. Beaver, Kolinsky, fox and skunk richly adorn—$25, $29.75, $35, $40, $50, $60 and $65

Street Coats—Jaunty three-quarter styles, belted and full skirted. High collar collar of material or fur—the coat for college girls, street or motor wear—$10 to $29.75

Limosine Coats—This elegant all-enveloping coat is full length and full satin lined; is shown in Duveltyne and velvet, handsomely trimmed with fine furs—$50 to $95

"La Camille" Corsets

Front-Lace Models in Notable Variety

The front-lace Corset has won the approval of great numbers of women. Its ease of adjustment, the beautiful, unbroken curve it assures at the back, are but two of the many qualities which constantly win more adherents to this style of Corset.

If you wear a Lace-in-Front Corset—here is the ideal place to choose it.

Back and Front Shield

The Ventilo back and front shield, an exclusive feature of La Camille, represents the most important improvement of the last decade. By relieving all pressure on the spine, by providing a free circulation of air, by preventing the lacer from scoring the flesh, really stylish corseting is permitted without a thought of discomfort.

Is Paris Fooling the American Woman?

Isadora Duncan Declares That
"No French Woman" Would Wear
the Absurdities Invented to Lure the "Vulgar Snobbery" of Newport.

By Pierre Raville.

THE latest from Paris," is not heard so frequently as in days before the war, but Paris still sends its edicts, and the eyes of a vast proportion of American women still turn longingly toward the capital of fashion.

Paris knows this. It has known for many decades the power it has over the feminine imagination. And like any fortune teller or necromancer it tries to meet the demand. The demand being for the bizarre and extravagant, Paris sits up nights to invent the bizarre and extravagant for those who insist upon it.

Just as China and Japan make ghastly bric-a-brac and loud-colored absurdities of fabric "for exportation," so Paris makes clothes it would not wear, "fashions" that make it laugh, gaw-gaws that make it grieve.

Just as collectors in America put into cabinets frightful inventions in pottery which they fancy have come out of oriental temples, so American women don fantastic clothes which they let themselves fancy reflect the very latest emotion of exclusive French millinery and tailoring art. "Mostly New Yorkers!" cries Isadora Duncan of the women who accept these absurdities.

Don't be misled. SOME French women do wear these things. They are paid to do it, and they do it very well. They go to the races in togery that makes Paris gasp and grin. And then they are photographed. These mannequins are wonderful.

After a while some one in New York, or Chicago, or Seattle blossoms forth in an identical creation. You are told that colored hair, or the crinoline skirt, or the harem dress or some other device is going to be seen everywhere. But somehow, once in a while, the prophecy doesn't come true at all. Paris fails to "put over" the joke on the Americans.

And so it may quite reasonably be asked, DOES Paris fool the American woman? Do the freaks really invade the United States and Canada with anything like the success that is expected? Are not the "extremes" accepted simply as extremes for what amusement there may be in them, for what joy they may give to a few scattered adventurers in poverty, while the great average well-dressed woman goes her way on the road of good taste?

ISADORA DUNCAN'S PROTEST IN A PARIS SHOP

"Imagine my horror on seeing a girl appear, flat-chested, her body cut short, in a species of up-side down sun-shade. I first imagined that this was some isolated error, but the pitiable procession followed. All were alike. My indignation made me exclaim, 'Horrible, unaesthetic, infamous! But, happily, no French woman will appear in such robes.' And in fact that is true. They have been made for certain Americans—New Yorkers mostly—and they harmonize with the architecture of that town. They have been made for Newport's vulgar snobbery."

"Grecian

Just now there is a very engaging medley of queer designs. Some of these are directly traceable to Paris. Some show the Paris influence. Certain others are probably the result of the present inventive desperation of certain American designers. These include the "plug" hat, the broad, bevelled veil banded to the hat, "choker" ruffs, abbreviated skirts, extremely high "boots" top-banded with fur, and a muff—Oh! The muff is a droll little joke! After being as big as a bed pillow it is offered as little as a purse—just big enough to warm the tips of the fingers.

GOVERNMENT IS PROBING GERMAN DYNAMITE PLOT

Fay's Associations and Sources of Financial Aid Subject of Minute Inquiry.

New York, October 30.—Although the cases of Robert Fay, the confessed German bomb plotter, and four other men charged with conspiracy to blow up steamers bearing supplies to the allies probably will be taken before the federal grand jury next Wednesday, United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall said today the government would not hasten prosecutions.

Fay's associations, his purchases of explosives, experiments with bombs and his sources of financial aid, together with his previous standing in Germany, Mr. Marshall said, are to be made the subject of minute inquiry.

"Fay's arrest, after he had been watched for weeks, was ordered because it was feared he was on the verge of making use of the bombs which he had prepared," said Mr. Marshall, "but now that we have him in custody the government will deliberately continue to investigate all the ramifications of the plotting if there were any ramifications. So far we have no evidence to show that Fay acted on other than his own respon-

The statement made by Mr. Shoemaker to the effect that the people of Kansas consumed something like 18,000,000 quarts of liquor in 1913 is practically correct. But even that is a remarkable record when compared with the consumption of liquor in the as-tion. I do not have the exact figures for 1913 before me, but the per capita consumption of liquor in this state for 1914, which will be assumed as being an average year, was 3.69 gallons. Figured on the same basis the per capita consumption in the United States for 1913 was 23 gallons.

SCIENCE AND LEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

Science Now KNOWS WHY SOLDIERS Who Are MAIMED Can Still "FEEL" Their Lost LIMBS

AN AMERICAN woman recently returned from Paris said that soldiers who had lost a limb "frequently complained of feeling a touch upon it" though the limb was perhaps far removed from their sight—lying somewhere along the battle front.

A well-known English surgeon gives the reason for this peculiar sensation in an interesting article he has prepared on "Surgery in the Army." He says:

"It is a well-known fact that not merely for a few hours but for weeks and even months after a limb has been cut off or taken off, the person seems to feel sensations in it, or rather in the place where it once was, and is conscious of it in different positions as though it were present. These sensations are very vivid for a time; the patient says that he feels his lost arm lying by his side, or on his breast, or even that he has a peculiar tingling or aching in the fingers that are gone, and the like.

"Precisely similar sensations are noticed when a leg has been amputated. But the common idea that these sensations have anything to do with the lost limb itself is very childish, for this may be thrown in the fire immediately after removal, or otherwise destroyed or mutilated, and the patient will know nothing of it if he is not told.

"The true explanation is very simple.

"We learn from infancy to associate certain local sensations with certain muscular movements. The nerve carries the impression of the sensation to the brain.

and the brain becomes conscious of the feeling as belonging to a particular muscular action. After this muscular action is no longer possible the nerves may still, through irritation, weakness or disease, take an impression to the brain, which is intensely localized through habit with the remembered muscular action.

"This is one of the proofs of what physicians call a muscular sense. This is not to be regarded as an actively conscious sense, like sight or touch, but is rather of the nature of organic sense, giving its information and working its effect without definite consciousness. This internal sensibility corresponds to every changing condition of the muscles, and even after the removal of a limb, or any part of the body, the sensations associated with it by the consciousness may remain."

STARTLING New THEORY EXPLAINS Mystery of HEREDITY

SCIENTIFIC studies of heredity are showing some very interesting and unexpected results. We know that the typical character of a man undergoes variations at different periods of a long life, and that the son is likely to "take after" his father. But we notice, often with surprise, that capacities that were dominant in a father, which gave him sometimes great reputation, frequently are entirely lacking in his son.

Literary distinction, genius in any particular direction, which distinguished a certain father are quite frequently absent in the case of his son. In wondering at this we fail to take note of the period in the father's life when he "made his mark."

After patient investigation science has come to the conclusion that the son inherits from his father only the qualities that were dominant at the time of his birth.

These conclusions are set forth in the book called "Dynamic Evolution," by C. I. Redfield, recently published. The author writes:

"As a general proposition the man between 20 and 30 is aggressive, ambitious and contented. He would rule the world with a club. This stage gradually merges into another, so that as a general proposition the man between 30 and 40 is in the artistic stage of life. He is a lover of poetry, music, painting and sculpture.

"The artistic stage gradually merges into the practical stage, which may be generally defined as between 40 and 50. The practical man looks at the dollars and cents, wishes to improve government, and has the qualities of statesmanship. As he passes beyond 50 into his older age he becomes philosophic in his sentiments and moral in his maxims.

That the son will partake of the father's type of mental energy that was dominant at the time of the son's birth is shown to be substantiated by history and biography. Mr. Redfield presents a classified list of world celebrities together with the ages of their respective fathers at the time of their birth.

At the age of 31 to 40, the artistic age, their fathers presented to the world such geniuses as Bach, Beethoven, Goethe, Shakespeare, Raphael, Carlyle and others of their status. In the list of statesmen these were born when their fathers were aged from 41 to 50: Bismarck, Cato, Cromwell, Machiavelli, Webster. Great names in philosophy born when their fathers were over 51 are: Aristotle, Bacon, Buddha, Confucius, Franklin, Moses and Solomon.

Fashions of Tunis Taken From Ancients

WOULD you know what life was like in the old stone age, when man lived in caves and fought the lion and the mastodon with chipped flints? You can go back to the age of stone—man in its most primitive state—by buying a ticket to Rio Janeiro and then traveling, partly by rail and partly on foot, to the land of the Botocudos.

You can go to the native states of India, where the Rajput chivalry rules. But if you would see Bagdad and all the romance of the "Arabian Nights" visit Tunis, where the people still believe in genii and fairies, and where their lives in an atmosphere of magic splendor and happy idleness.

It has been said that the Arab of Tunis is really one of the great artists of the world. He steadfastly maintains an atmosphere of art and beauty without parallel. He himself is handsome—and the women, too, with their large, dark, liquid eyes and a finely trained, graceful and stately habit of body. And the dress and dwelling places of the Arab men and women are marvelously beautiful. In their costumes, styles of which are derived from those of the ancients, blend the utmost delicacy of tint and the most gorgeous colorings, and the rainbow hues of a Tunis street have a softness that puts the dress of every other race to shame.

The houses are masses of glittering white, with green doorways and blue horse-shoe arches. Inside is a wealth of lovely colored tiles, with a lacwork of wood and pierced stone, and courtyards filled with blooming shrubs, amid which a fountain plays. Nearly every house has a courtyard, enclosed by a square of rooms, and nearly always there is a garden, the most charming animal pet, wandering where it will from room to room, and nibbling at the trees in the courtyard.

Perhaps the infinite splendor of color that marks everything in Tunis is a legacy from Carthage. The Carthaginians, like their kinsmen in Tyre and Sidon, were the masters of the art of dyeing 2,500 years ago. The wonderful purple dye of Tyre, obtained from a shellfish in the Mediterranean, was one of the wonders of antiquity. Dido, who founded Carthage, brought with her the secrets of the dyes of Tyre, and it is this knowledge, spread now among all the people of the country, that has brought about the beauty of common life in Tunis at the present day.

The best time to see the city of old romance is on the night of the Feast of the Prophet. The great bazaar is then lighted up with crystal chandeliers and festoons of fairy lights, and every merchant hangs outside his shop the richest treasures he possesses. Nothing is for sale. The beautiful carpets of Kairwan, the exquisite silks and other objects of art, are put out to please the vision of the crowds and to add to the beauty of the scene. Everybody wears his richest dress.

"Why, that's very simple!" he said. "A horse with a short tail is very much bothered by flies and gnats. He is kept so busy driving them off with his head that he naturally cannot eat much. A horse with a long tail does not need to use his head to keep off flies, but can busy himself eating.

Nature Preserves Pig's Face in Wood

"PIGGY-WIGGY" has been proclaimed officially the mascot of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. This high honor was conferred the other day after officials of the association voted him to be the freakiest freak that ever stepped out of (or rather was ever sawed out of) a piece of wood.

"Piggy-wiggy" first saw the light of day in a lumber camp at Mellen, Wis. Sawyers were busy cutting up a big black ash tree when one noticed the peculiar face. The heartwood forms the outline of "piggy-wiggy" head, and the eyes form the eyes and mouth.

The strange freak of nature was sent to R. S. Kellogg, secretary of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, who hung it in the office of the association at Chicago. At a meeting of officers the other day "piggy-wiggy" was given his name and adopted as the official mascot.

He will attend all future conventions of the association. It is probable that at future meetings of the association other oddities of nature may be entered in competition with "piggy-wiggy" for his place of honor, but it is thought the unusual face shown in the accompanying picture will hold its place.

How Banana Planters Rush Products to Market

THE value of the yield per acre of bananas in the Colima district, Honduras, is less than that of wheat, but, unlike wheat, the banana cannot be stored. It must be marketed when it is ready for marketing, as the demand in the United States fluctuates with the extent of the American fruit crop.

The banana planter does not go into his fields and pluck his bananas as he thinks they have properly matured, but receives telegraphic orders from the railway or steamship company to cut bananas on a certain day not more than thirty-six hours in advance of the scheduled departure of the ship. Cars are placed on his side-track, usually directly in the plantation.

The planter goes over his fields and cuts all fruit ready for shipping, neither too ripe nor too green, has it hauled to the waiting cars on mule-back or ox-carts and inspected.

At the close of the day the waiting cars are picked up by the banana trains and hauled to the coast. A day is required to load the ship, and three days later the vessel is in New Orleans.

Germans Lead In Wireless

THERE are about ten wireless stations in France, the most powerful being that of the Eiffel Tower. The Germans have many more, and especially the great station of Nauen, with a constant transmitting power of 6,000 miles, occasionally raised to 12,000 miles. They have a similar post in Spain, and another at Seyville, L. L., opposite to New York. The three pylons of the latter, each nearly 500 feet high, with the antennae and all the apparatus, were manufactured in Germany, and sent from Rotterdam to Hoboken by a Holland-America steamer. When the cables connecting America with Germany were cut, the latter prepared a perfect substitute, or nearly so.

Device to Save Wasted Time

ANEW device brought out by an Englishman puts an end to waste of time in using the telephone. The invention is called an amplifier and can be connected with the receiver by pressing a button. By this simple arrangement one does not have to wait at the telephone while the person at the other end goes in search of the person you seek.

How to Shoot Humming Birds

THE smallest bird shot made is out of the question, for the thinnest seeds of lead would destroy the delicate plumage. The only way in which the bird can be captured for commercial purposes is to shoot it with a drop of water from a blowgun or a fine jet from a small syringe. Skillfully directed, the water stuns him. He falls into a slumber, and, before he recovers consciousness is suspended over a cyanide jar.

This must be done quickly, for if he comes to his senses before the cyanide whiff snuffs out his life he is sure to ruin his plumage in his struggles to escape. Humming birds vary in size from specimen perhaps half as large as a sparrow, to those scarcely bigger than a bee.

Black Cats Overrun Island

THE Island of Black Cats is a name applied to Chatham Island in the Pacific Ocean, about 750 miles west of the coast of Ecuador. It is overrun with black cats; indeed, cats of no other color are seen there. These animals live in the crevices of the lava foundation near the coast, and subsist by catching fish and crabs, instead of rats and mice.

Steve Kane Dead.

Kane, formerly a widely known National league baseball umpire and later with the American association and Federal league, was stricken with a heart attack and died in a hotel here today. Kane was 45 years old.

The run which was had this past summer attracted attention all over the country on account of the fact that it was headed by a big brand name, mounted on motorcycles. The endurance of the motorcycle rider now is to get away from races and endurance contests, or where there is speed and danger attached, and on these sociability runs all of this is eliminated, and everybody has a good time, because they take a slow pace and have ample time to see the country they are passing.

It is planned to hold this first one in Augusta, Ga., as a central point for the two Carolinas and Georgia. If should be a big success, as expected the riders will have a meeting and decide where the event should be held the following year. The officers will be nominated to take charge and handle it in the regular manner.

Don't Forbid Your Children to Climb Trees for It Will Give Them Courage and Self-Reliance.

By DELIA AUSTRIAN.

MOST mothers want their children to be good, and just as soon their little ones reach an age where they can reason and understand the mothers try to make them realize the importance of being good. But these same mothers do not seem to realize the importance of their children being happy. If one of their children is good-natured they attribute it to the naturally happy disposition of one parent, and if another child is ill-tempered they excuse it on the ground that the other parent is naturally ill-tempered and mores, never thinking of the idea that good character may be cultivated.

Set Cheerful Example.

If parents welcome the child who brings their new-born baby it is certainly a first step in the right direction. Making a child feel from the time he develops a first gleam of self-consciousness that he is a welcome guest in a home has great influence on cultivating a contented nature. Your happiness and smile of contentment are sure to stimulate similar feelings in your child. A little girl whose name was Happy Girl was being complimented on having a happy disposition. The little 5-year-old girl listened and then said, "Why should I not be happy? Mother wishes me to be so, and therefore she calls me Happy Girl." The truth of the matter was that the mother of this little girl made her feel that it was an honor.

How much wiser it would be for the mother to try and understand the boy's spirit, and allow him to climb his first tree under her supervision, so that she may show him how to be careful.

After a circus the boys and girls of any village try for weeks in their small way to emulate the daring of the circus performers. They have been inspired with an ambition to outdo their fellows, to shine above others in life's work, and they should be encouraged. And they will be all the more interested in the new arts they seek to master if they are told that the circus performer before learning a trick first carefully rehearses what he must do to save himself if anything goes wrong. Trapeze tricks are often more easy than the task of working out a method and plan of falling which will result in slight injury should the performer slip or make a mistake.

Nature's Strange Law.

Which brings us to the fact that a peculiar law of life demands that the child shall learn by experience—the child refuses to accept as true the laws of cause and effect which may have been learned at dear cost by its parents.

The child who is not allowed to attempt any adventure grows up a frightened creature, lacking in any resourcefulness in meeting life's problems. From the time his playfellows find that he has lost all courage because of his mother's determination that he shall attempt no excursion on his own account the child becomes a shrinking mortal, ever fearful that his secret will become known and he will be taunted with the cry of "tied to your mother's apron strings."

A child, for example, may be told never on any account to climb trees. The result is that he faces charges of cowardice by his boy and girl friends.

How it Works Out.

This plan of "looking ahead" means that your child, when on his way to school, will unconsciously find himself looking both ways before crossing a street much used by traffic. In other words, it is a school in which he unconsciously learns the folly of being heedless. Much as you may dislike the thought you must know that some day your little boy will be shifting for himself. Train him then with that thought in your mind, that he may use and not abuse the freedom later to be his.

How much wiser it would be for the mother to try and understand the boy's spirit, and allow him to climb his first tree under her supervision, so that she may show him how to be careful.

Vivian's Heart to Heart Talks on Love

I HAVE little patience with a young woman or even the adviser of a young woman who holds as a part of her life philosophy, "Break all the hearts you can." True, it takes both a handsome and a clever girl to accomplish this successfully, but it is sure to end in grief, for some day she will meet as subtle and clever a suitor as she is. If you ever come upon a handsome bachelor girl of thirty summers or more and you wonder why she is still unwed you may not be far from the mark in concluding that it was too much breaking of hearts that finally brought her to grief. If she had been a sensible girl she would never have been filled with a desire to break hearts, but would have used as a slogan, "I shall keep men guessing."

If you think my advice not sound, here is the opinion of a novelist student who says, "An ounce of mystery in a woman is worth a pound of confidence." This is, of course, no cynical you may feel it only written for the sake of its smart effect. Still it has, like most epigrams, a grain of truth at least.

Men love a story of mystery, especially when it involves a heart problem. Can a girl be too transparent when it comes to a question of showing her feelings? Does not a man weary of a girl who lacks reserve and tells him everything she has in mind, and becomes a project about whom he can no longer speculate? She may be the nicest kind of a girl, and if she shows her feelings too plainly she is bound to be uninteresting, or at least just a little flat.

How different she is from the happy, light-hearted girl who enjoys the companionship and attentions of men, but does not take them too seriously. If you know this type of girl you have heard men say of her: "She is so impulsive I wonder whether I have got

If your child falls and hurts herself there is no need of emphasizing this fact. It is your business to make her feel that she should be grateful that she has not hurt herself worse. Should she disobey you and put her finger on a hot stove after you tell her not to, only to burn it, let this be a lesson in obedience. She should be made to understand the relation of cause and effect here.

Hints to Housewives

A MIXTURE OF SOAPY STARCH AND MILK will remove stains from milked linen.

WHEN JELLY WILL NOT SET add a little of a lemon or some white vinegar and the difficulty will be immediately overcome.

TO CLEAR BEETLES out of cupboards and larders, sprinkle a little kerosene over the boards and it will kill the eggs as well as the insects.

TO IMPROVE THE FLAVOR OF OLD POTATOES and prevent them from turning black, add a little milk to the water in which they are boiled.

TO POLISH A COPPER, take a little finely powdered bathbrick, moisten with vinegar, and when it is mixed to a paste rub a little on the copper. Let it stand for a time, then rub off and polish with a soft cloth.

FOR HOME-MADE LEMONADE, take two and a half pounds of sugar, four lemons, two and a half quarts of boiling water, two ounces of citric acid. Place all the ingredients in a large bowl and pour boiling water over, stirring until the sugar is dissolved.

BEFORE CUTTING NEWLY BAKED BREAD always dip the knife in boiling water.

A LITTLE KEROSENE ON A RAG polishes zinc cans and baths to an almost ivory appearance.

TO PREVENT NEEDLES AND PINS FROM RUSTING, stick them into a piece of flannel which has been saturated with machine oil. This can be folded up and kept in a tin box.

WHEN SPRINKLING CLOTHES, use hot water, which dampens them more evenly. Tennis and cricket rackets should be washed in lukewarm water and rinsed in same-hot water to prevent them from shrinking or drying hard.

JUGS OR BASINS in which milk is kept should be well scoured with salt at least once a week.

IF THE COLOR HAS BEEN TAKEN FROM SILKS by acids it may be restored by applying to the spots a little kerosene or oil of vitriol.

WHEN CAKE TINS ARE THIN, scatter a little sand over the oven shelf before putting in the tin; this prevents the cake from burning in the baking.

SHOULD A MEAT-MENDER OR AN EGG-BEATER WORK HARD, put glycerin in the bearings. It is a lubricant which will not get in the food, and is not at all harmful.

The Arrangement of the Living or Club Room Is Often the Secret of Making Your Home Attractive.

By MME. MAISON.

CHARMING scheme for a living-room in an apartment, especially for a room with light only on two, say, three sides, for many of even the better class buildings are unable to give more, would be a creamy yellow. Let us suppose we can plan this exactly as we wish, that the place is new and we are to be the first occupants.

Landlord Disappoints.

We have persuaded the landlord to do the woodwork an ivory. It would not agree to five or six coats with the two last rubbed down to give the egg-shell finish, but excellent results have been obtained with two coats of flat white and two thin coats of enamel called "flat," so the effect is really lovely.

The floors of oak have been done with a dark filler, waxed and rubbed down to a dull surface, very good with an American rug of yellow and blue, an imitation of a Chinese oriental, which is very satisfying, as the real thing was way beyond our pocketbook.

The wall paper is a satin stripe cream and yellow with no border, as the ceiling lacks just a bit of being nine feet, and the appearance of height is desirable in this room, as it will contain a large overstuffed couch in golden brown velour. The ceiling is of a deep ivory blending with the wall and woodwork.

The curtains on the French doors going into the sun parlor and dining-room are of two layers of tulle, one pale yellow and one of rosy pink. They are shirred tightly top and bottom on small brass rods.

The other windows have straight drapery of a Chinese blue and yellow striped linen fabric with a line of black which is most effective when sparingly used.

The table is dark oak carved, and beside it an oak two chair upholstered in tapestry to harmonize with the colors used, being a mixture of dull greens, old blues and a little golden brown. This will be very serviceable. The fireplace is of oriental brick, which will go with any color scheme, as the next tenants may have entirely different ideas as to the color scheme.

A couple of broomstick wicker chairs, one of Windsor style, and one or two painted black with stenciled ornaments make this room a joy to sit in. Of course, the personal touch of flowers and palms must be added to make it individual.

fabulous house with a long flight of stairs going straight up without a turn?

Bare steps are much easier to keep clean and most of the new houses do not have the stairs carpeted. On the other hand, if the house is an old one the stairs were probably finished in the ordinary way and meant to be covered. A carpeted step has an advantage—it gives almost absolute quiet, which is oftentimes desirable. Either way you like best will be proper. If you decide to do without, the treads may be dark with cream white linings if the rest of the woodwork is white. If you get the carpeting choose a perfectly plain velour or one of an invisible two-tone pattern.

Covers for Furniture.

Now while the children are young I feel that my best upholstered furniture should be covered. What material would you advise me to get that will be good for all the year round wear? Thank you.

Cretone makes a very cheerful room, but you may tire of a set pattern for constant wear, so I believe a natural colored linen or what is called dimity, gotten in the upholstery department, with a wide or narrow stripe (same color) will be best. It washes perfectly, but allow for shrinkage, or, better still, shrink the goods before you make it up. These slip covers may be cut to slip on and off easily, and may be quickly removed for any special occasion.

Answers to Questions.

Bare or Carpeted Stairs.

Your department is of great assistance, as one is often puzzled as to what is best to do. I have heard that stair carpets are no longer fashionable. What would you suggest in an old-fashioned house?

Talks With the Woman Who Works

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

THE war is teaching women that they can put their shoulder to the wheel in a way they never dreamed possible. No less interesting is the fact that thousands of women are succeeding in lines of endeavor never essayed before. Women are taking the lesson from England, where the women have not ventured in many and varied business undertakings.

The English women were determined from the start that there should be no food famine. Many, inspired by a feeling of patriotism and others because they were compelled to earn their living, are working on the farms and learning to cultivate them in a scientific manner.

After working on stock farms of others for a short time many of these enthusiastic workers discover that even the feeding of pedigree pigs, calves or chickens offers chances of disaster for those who attempt it by the light of nature. It is therefore of the utmost importance that careful training in these apparently trivial details are given.

Well-equipped farm institutes have undertaken the work of teaching women scientific farming. Most of the workers are daughters of doctors, professors and clergymen. Their enthusiasm and ready checks show that scientific farming is a splendid occupation for high school and college graduates, as well as for girls who have spent their girlhood on farms.

This movement is echoed in America, for so advanced reading courses in vegetable gardening has just been started by the extension department at Cornell University, in order to meet a growing demand for home-study courses. The advanced reading course in vegetable gardening is the second of such courses offered; one in fruit-growing was started last fall.

Both courses are said to appeal to wives of the farmers who desire to "read up" on the subjects, as well as to those who are not fully familiar with the subjects treated.

Work in the Open Fields Makes for Good Health.

These advanced reading courses are conducted by means of a textbook, by question and by correspondence, and a special effort is made to assist in making a local application to the principles and practices discussed. The work of those taking the course is graded, and the only expense of either course is in connection with a standard textbook, not published by the college.

Those who desire to receive information on practical farming problems without even this expense may register for the general reading course lessons.

Farm work at first means backache and sore muscles. In England the girls' daily routine begins at 4:30 a. m. and goes on with two short intervals until 5:30. Small groups of workers are taken in turn for each division of work—some to weed and hoe, some to prepare the pigs' food, and even to feed the young pigs. This last task seems easy, but it is not. This is because a test food has to be kept in movement all the time.

time, else some of the animals become terribly fat and others too thin though they are fed out of the same receptacle.

The women are taught to milk by hand and in the old-fashioned style, but the milk is creamed by separators and kept at the proper temperature by the best machinery.

The management of the machinery and how to keep it in good working order so far as simple means are concerned form part of the instruction. The domestic side of farm life is not neglected in the training for farm service. Every second day the women volunteer to undertake the domestic work of the farm, including cooking and preparing the food for the whole household.

The directors of the institution hold that the indoor life rots the nerves and muscles and strengthens them for the work on the farms. The women are enthusiastic about their work. Some are resolved to become farm hands when they have finished their studies, others are preparing to become farmers, fruit growers or poultry keepers, in business for themselves.

Their dress is as businesslike as are their resolutions. It consists of a thick skirt, heavy boots and a large, old-fashioned sunbonnet made of cotton. Their homely dress announces symbolically their intention to succeed, and proves the sincerity of their work.

These agricultural schools for women are as popular with women as the agricultural schools for both sexes are in the United States, and show that agriculture is a natural and pleasant occupation for girls who love to work hard and live a free and open life.

ETHEL—You ask me if you are wise in spending your entire salary, and if not, why. Certainly not. I recommend that you start a savings account at once. You must save now while you are young; your savings may answer you in good stead some day. Moreover, if you spend all you make now, it will be hard for you to learn how to save whatever your income is later on.

New York, October 30.—The city budget for 1916 will be about $114,000,000, or approximately $15,000,000 higher than that of 1915, according to semi-official estimates made today. This means an advance of 13 points in the tax rate of the greater city. The average tax rate of the five boroughs at present is $1.92.

Unique and Beautiful Plan For Crumley-Hensley Wedding

Of unique and beautiful plan will be the wedding of Miss Julia Crumley and Dr. Allyn Hensley, of Quebec, Canada, which will take place November 17th at Park Street Methodist church.

The bride's large piano class of boys and girls, from little tots to girls and most budding on young ladyhood, will be her attendants.

A group of the larger girls will sing the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" in the procession, which will be very picturesque, all the girls wearing white dresses with pink sashes and hair ribbons, and carrying baskets of pink flowers, and crumpling themselves effectively within the chancel. The little boys of the class will be ribbon-bearers.

Dr. Hensley's uncle, an Episcopal bishop from Canada, will perform the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Rogers, pastor of the Park Street church.

The attendants will be: Maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Peoples; bridesmaids, Misses Maud Foster, Christine McEachern, Lella Barton, Florence Greenough, Vincentia Allen, Teddy Parrish, Evelyn Kelly, Margaret Quare, Grace Moore, Louise Cowart, Bess Moore, Annie Griffin, Katharine Culbreth.

The ribbon bearers will be Masters William Weather, Charles Ward, Cuddy Bryson, Hazlett McCullough, Calhoun Weather, James Bryson, Robert Hopkins, Robert McCullough, Jack Peole, Alvin Peck, Holbrook Hadley.

The ring bearers will be little June Hensley, daughter of the bridegroom. The train bearers will be Anne McCleary and Mamie Belle Hollis.

The flower girls and chorus will include Frieda Smith, Angel Allen, Rachel Neely, Rosalie Hammer, Vera Kamper, Pearl Coggins, Lillian LeConte, Kathryn Ives, Ida Beckham, Gertrude Murray, Addie McCleary, Virginia White, Cynthia Ward, Mary Ellen Strickland, LaRose Wagner, Ida Dudley Glass, Lella Barton, Dorothy Mapp, Katherine Peole, Frances Peck, Elsie Allen, Emily Stead, Constance Spalding, Mary Brown Spalding, Martha Erwin, Mary Caldwell, Margaret Bryson, Florence Strickland, Sarah Ivin.

Dr. Hensley and his bride will tour the west before going to their home in Quebec.

Informal Dance.

A pleasant event of Saturday evening was the dancing party at which Misses Ethel and Alice Louise Perkins were hostesses.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, yellow chrysanthemums and Halloween emblems. Those dancing were Miss Leatha Acres, Miss Emmie Locke, Mrs. W. Cheatham, Miss Annie Hollingsworth, Miss Sarah Gillette, Miss Clara Sullivan, Miss Beulah Brooks, Miss Willie Lander, Miss Marie Maude Haynes, Miss Emmie Raver, Miss Edna L. Adams, Miss Janet Rogers, Miss Dorothy Perkins, Mrs. F. H. Butler, Miss Eugene Fleming, Mr. Robert Snyder, Mr. George Smith, Mr. Charlie Summers, Mr. George Anderson, Mr. Forrest Hayes, Mr. Walker Bloodworth, Mr. H. Camp, Mr. Joe Stokes, Mr. J. J. Sullivan, Mr. Robert Woodward, Mr. H. Chadwick, Mr. Herbert Hamby, Mr. L. C. Johnson, Mr. J. Reed, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Bryan and Mrs. George Hamilton.

Spencer-Thomson.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Spencer and Mr. Charles Edward Thomson was an interesting event of Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Bouldin Spencer, in Rosanoke.

The bride was lovely in her traveling gown of brown velvet with hat to match. Her only attendant was Miss Hamie Kirkpatrick, who wore pink tulle and tulle with large picture hat of black velvet. Mr. Brodus Cheating, of Memphis, was best man.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Thomson will be at home in Memphis.

For Miss Ramey.

Among those who will entertain in compliment to Miss Elizabeth Ramey before her marriage on November 29 will be Miss Olive LeFlore, Miss Amelia Smith and Miss Annie Mary Fuller.

Miss Ramey will share honors with Miss Christine Moulton at a bridge party to be given Monday by Miss Martha Lawhe.

Pretty bride-to-be. Her marriage to Mr. Turner Carson will be a brilliant event of November 23.

Annual Art Exhibit.

The second annual exhibition of work by local artists will be opened at the Ponce de Leon apartments on Saturday afternoon, November 6, with a private view for the members of the Atlanta Art association. The officers and the art committee of the association will receive; tea will be served, and this "varnishing day," as the French call it, will be one in which the members will have an opportunity to meet and see and discuss together the many exhibits sent by talented Atlanta men and women.

The exhibition will be open to the public on Monday, the 11th. All artists who plan to send exhibits are asked to send them not later than Tuesday afternoon, as the jury will meet Wednesday morning to decide which work to accept. The best piece of work exhibited will be awarded honorable mention and the artist given a year's membership in the art association.

The work to be exhibited includes every branch of art that is done in Atlanta, and includes, besides oil, water color, pastel and china painting, sculpture, architecture, pen and ink, terra cotta, wrought iron, hand-made furniture and wood carving, lamps, pottery, etc. Each exhibit must be a perfect work of art of its kind, in that it should be something that the artist has done for his own pleasure and not for the sake of the exhibition.

Tea will be served every afternoon to a group of men and women from the art association will be present to make the various exhibits as helpful and interesting as possible.

Mrs. E. W. Moore is chairman of the art committee and Mrs. Walter Howard is chairman of the committee to serve tea during the first week.

Woman's Suffrage League.

A call meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage League was held Wednesday afternoon at the Carnegie library. The president, Mrs. Frances Smith Whitfield, presided. Plans for the large suffrage parade during the Harvest Festival in November were discussed and active steps were taken to make the parade a success. The league decided on an automobile parade, each car to be decorated in the suffrage colors, yellow and black, and flags and yellow flowers to be used.

The following ladies were elected delegates to the National American Woman's Suffrage convention, to be held in Washington, D. C., December 11-12: Mrs. E. C. Whitfield, president; Mrs. Elizabeth McEachern, first vice president; Mrs. J. H. Holliman, second vice president; Mrs. Jack Hawkins, secretary.

Young People Suffragists.

The Georgia Young People's Suffrage association, at a business meeting Wednesday afternoon, decided to give on a float for the parade to the Georgia Harvest Festival in November. The young people will also give the musical scores at the better babies contest.

Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R.

The Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., has decided to add a new branch of work to its organization, that of charity. Heretofore it has been busy building its home, the Craigie House, and working along patriotic and educational lines, but in view of the many real needs of the people, it has decided to add a branch to the great charitable work of our city.

The first term of the new branch is the hospital for crippled children. On next Tuesday afternoon, November 11, it will give a birthday party to which the children of the hospital will be invited. There will be twelve beautiful babies, representing the month of the year. Each visitor is expected to visit the table representing the child whose birthday is being celebrated and to give a gift to the child.

Each visitor is expected to visit the table representing the child whose birthday is being celebrated and to give a gift to the child. The program of music and reading has been prepared and a pleasant time is promised to all who come. One table will be devoted to colonial and revolutionary objects and will prove attractive to men.

The date is November 6, at 2:30 o'clock, and the place, the Craigie House, opposite the Driving Club on Piedmont avenue.

This entertainment is conducted by Mrs. A. H. Rice, first vice regent, and chairman of the board of directors. Every member of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., is expected to be present and assist in entertaining the visitors.

Suffrage Tea-Dances.

Mrs. Henry Wason, chairman of the committee for the suffrage tea-dances, announces the opening tea of the season to be given at the Craigie House, November 6, from 8 to 10 o'clock. The first tea-dance will be given by the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., and will feature a special musical program and a demonstration of the very latest dancing teacher of the city. Invitations may be secured from Mrs. Wason at the suffrage headquarters.

211 Peachtree street, or from any of the chaplains. Among the latter will be Mrs. Emily C. McDonald, Miss A. J. Rea, Mrs. T. H. Carnes, Mrs. George Harrington, Mrs. Fred Jeter and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown.

Romance and Tragedy of Europe's Broken Men

How Faithful Women Are Marrying the Maimed, Blinded and Battered Heroes of the Great Conflict in Europe, and the Vast Problem

Presented to the Warring Peoples by the Enormous Numbers of Injured Men

Marriage of Lieut. Peptina (badly wounded in the foot) at the Church of St. Jacques, in Paris. The Lieutenant, Who Won Honors for Bravery, Was Supported to the Carriage by His Beautiful Young Bride.

A Blinded German Soldier Learning to Read the "Braille" Writing.

practical life. There is, but one road: A never-tiring impulse to depend upon one's self—that is, to become independent, of others. Every outside aid, therefore, should be firmly refused if there is but a shadow of possibility of being able to help one's self.

"I have never worried myself with efforts to replace my hands and arms, with my feet. It must not be concluded, however, that my readiness was acquired without effort. Locking myself in a room, for fear of being ridiculed, I would rack my brains and experiment, until finally, after a hundred failures, a possibility of realization appeared in sight. Patience and again patience was my guiding star.

"Learning to play the violin was the thing that cost me the greatest effort. When, after endless attempts, a sound seemed to have been found, I made for a long time no perceptible progress. Wilhelm Schuster in Königsberg, and subsequently David in Leipzig, took pains to teach me for three years, until I could venture to make my first eral selections, was praised in these memorable words:

"I'm not a musician, but I have conceived a fondness for you on account of your art; but I honor your courage, your energy and the perseverance with which you have overcome your great misfortune."

"And," says the count, "it would impress the same thing now upon the hearts of all the one-armed: to have courage, energy and perseverance to overcome their hard fate."

Appalled by the great number of blinded soldiers, the Hungarian specialists, Prof. Gross and Sully, have started a subscription for the erection of a special institution destined to assure a livelihood for these unfortunate victims of the war. There they will be taught occupations suitable to their infirmity.

On the other hand, Prof. Bismarck of Berlin and Prof. Lorenz of Leipzig

From that moment the men began to experience the cheering influence of hope. No sooner had they become aware of the tremendous fact that they were still good for something in the world than they took heart.

"We made the mistake at first of trying recreation, concerts, games, lectures. But we quickly discovered that the men deserted everything in favor of work. They would rather make brushes and baskets or cane chairs than listen to the finest music we could offer them. It was the same with games and lectures. We found the psychological value of work superior to that of any other diversion we could devise."

Prof. Heftmann, director of the Hindenburg House, at Königsberg, recently conducted an amazing demonstration with a man with two artificial hands and two artificial feet. The patient had so mastered his mechanical aids that he could do almost everything that a normal is called upon to do under ordinary circumstances. Another man so equipped worked at saw and drill in the workshop and seemed to have lost by his misfortune but little of his old-time skill. Then there were many men at their former occupations with artificial arms and feet.

Backed by the French government and the society he represents, he has created a second "Lighthouse" of the blind community under his direction in Paris.

"Earthly Purgatory."

"The first three days I spent here with the blind," he says, in telling of his work, "were passed in the midst of a sort of earthly purgatory. I have never before seen so much thoroughgoing misery foregathered in a single place. My charges moped through the long hours of the day, nursing their bitterness. The stillness of the nights was broken often and often by their hoarse sobs as they lay in torture on their narrow cots."

"At that time our workshops were not ready, and I was in despair to know what to do with the men. But the end of my difficulties came unexpectedly. On the fourth day of our history here I discovered that our instructor in the Braille system of reading and writing—himself a blind man—had learned the trade of a brushmaker. He said he could teach a man to make a brush, after a rough fashion, in a few hours."

"I seized the opportunity eagerly, found the tools and materials for the experiment, and, selecting purposely the most despondent man in the institution, set him to work on a brush, under the direction of the Braille instructor. The result was that that man came to me, before the day was over, cured of his melancholy."

"I am saved," he told me. "I am able to do something in life again! That is all I ask."

Shortly every other unfortunate had heard his story. The psychological effect was instantaneous. Says he:

"The first task of the instructor," says Dr. Alfred Gradenwitz, "consists in making the patient independent of his friends and raw-looking in him the self-confidence which he has lost. Already at the hospital during convalescence proper, he has been induced to hide away his time with manual work of the most varied description, thus preventing him from brooding over the outlook on his future life. At the cripples' home, where he finds the military orders, so familiar to him, he learns, from early morning to late at night, how to do without the help of others, and how to perform such operations as belong to our daily life. Dressing, washing, making his bed, eating and drinking, and cutting his meat and bread with one hand only, all this affords an opportunity for useful exercise and is soon mastered by the patient. Left-hand writing is readily acquired by those whose right hand has been paralyzed or amputated."

Herr Duthaus, an armless musical artist, as an inspiration to the crippled men in the hospitals, has told in the Berliner Tageblatt how he overcomes tremendous obstacles. Says he:

"A person who sees me perform ing labor, naturally no longer find my achievements wonderful. They appear perfectly natural to me, and I feel convinced that every one who, with my physical constitution, is earnestly desirous to advance, will very soon accomplish what I have done. I am not referring here to artistic skill, but to the needs of public appearance in the Leipzig Gewandhaus."

But the most interesting testimony regarding training is given by Count Zichy, a remarkable one-armed musician of Budapest, violinist and pianist, who, after he had been the guest at dinner of Kaiser Wilhelm I. and played var-

MAURICE MAETERLINCK wrote that sorrowfully appealing conception, "The Sightless," too soon. He has said that this war is transforming the world, changing old standards to a profound appreciation of great spiritual truths, and that through the horrible mark of widespread murder and ruin we will come into a new and glorious vision. We shall see within the very transfiguration of being.

This may be an unconscious message to the great Army of the Blind, smitten to silence by the blight, which is coming in torture and darkness from many of the battlefields—young men warm with the quick of life, and in whose blood are the love of living and the effective will to live; humans to whom the pleasures of sight go linked with the keen appreciation of perfect physical being. But they are doomed for the melancholy balance of mortal days to a world of darkness—this World of Sightless Men.

Besides this great tragedy of the war, the infinitely pathetic creation of the Belgian mystic seems but a poignant, fleeting expression of the banishment from light and the strange abysses and intelligences of darkness. That gave us a hushed glimpse into the world of the sightless; but here we have melancholy squadrons, armies of men scourged from the universe of visible things by the giant hand of War, and led like halting infants back to the paths of peace—a World of Sightless Men.—MARK TELFAIR.

BLINDED men in the prime of vigor, faced with the task of living, are not the only pathetic discards of war, for there are those who are frightfully maimed, without hands and legs. They form a problem to which all of the warring countries have addressed themselves with a vigor already productive of the most gratifying results. In France there is efficiently organized "The Friend of the Blind"; in England, the Blinded Soldiers and Sailors Hotel, St. Dunstan's, Regent's Park; in Germany, the Oscar-Helene-Helm, at Zehlendorf, near Berlin, and the famous Hindenburg House, at Königsberg; in Budapest, a special hospital is to be erected.

It is a sight that leaves an indelible impression to see the blind wounded taking their first walk abroad in the care of white-robed nurses. There is tragedy sharply written on every face—tragedy softened by resignation, sharpened by despair, and made brutally effective by more dumb submissiveness. And a person who has beheld the afflicted of both sides says they show these characteristics:

The Frenchman is the most easily influenced, and, though he may sink into the gulf, he prefers the heights of optimism.

The Austrian is depressed and brooding, but open to cheerful advice.

Hospital Romance.

The Englishman feels the tragedy perhaps most keenly, but accepts it with the dogged courage that marks him in battle. But he becomes reconciled to the inevitable quite soon.

The Russian is silent and uncomplaining. He accepts fate with the same nerveless indifference that he faces death.

The German blind are grim stoics, and the maimed, for the most part, are patient and hopeful.

While tragedy abides with these men, romance is no stranger, for love, hate or blind are terms that mean nothing to true love. There is told the story of a much sought-after English beauty who rejected the boy who went to the war—in fact, he went away "to forget her"—and who came like an angel to him when he was brought back with eyes that could reflect her image no more.

A nurse in the hospital where she gave her attention to many, she nevertheless made him her special care and led his first hesitating steps when he left his bed to go out into the sunlight which he could not see. He lost his sight, but he won his best beloved, who will be his eyes.

TECH HIGH CAPTURES FIRST PREP CONTEST

Junior Smithies Easily Win From Georgia Military Academy 40 to 3.

Rolling up six touchdowns and adding four points by goals while G. M. A. was making but three points by a field goal, Tech High experienced little difficulty in winning the first game of the local prep football season. The final count of the affair which was staged yesterday morning on Grant field was 40 to 3.

The game was Tech High's throughout. After G. M. A. had made their three points on a pretty field goal by Clayton in the first few minutes of the game, Tech High started a march down the field and from then on it was but a question of how large the final score would be. Clayton, the boy who made the drop kick for G. M. A. was later hurt in the game and had to be carried from the field. However, his injury is not considered serious.

Tech High's line played a magnificent game. They opened holes time after time for their backs to plunge through for good gains and held the opposition at all times.

G. M. A. was able to gain but two first downs on Tech High, one being made by a forward pass, while Tech High gained their distance every time except on three occasions, when they were forced to punt.

Wallace and Robert Smith, the half-backs of the winning eleven, played great football. These two players did the bulk of the work for Tech High, and on several occasions made spectacular runs for a considerable distance. Each made two touchdowns, running anywhere from ten to thirty yards each time for the goal. Their defensive work was also good. Pete Day, who played center for the Junior Smithies, was another star. He ran his team well and in addition, made several spectacular broken field runs. In the third quarter he made the prettiest run of the game, returning a punt from his own twenty-yard line to G. M. A.'s fifteen-yard line. Except for Beatty's fine tackle, he would have lost away for a touchdown. Harlan, at full, again proved his worth at line smashing, several times gaining the necessary two or three yards for first downs.

Clayton's drop kick was the best individual piece of work seen between the halves. Harlan, at full, again proved his worth at line smashing, several times gaining the necessary two or three yards for first downs.

All of Tech High's touchdowns were made by straight football tactics. Tech High played straight football throughout. Not once during the entire game did they try anything of a fake or trick nature. They did their best work during the first half, the score at the end of this time being 25 to 3.

G. M. A.'s coach evidently poured some hot stuff into his men between the halves, for G. M. A. played a much better game in the last half than they did in the first. It was in the second half that they won the necessary distance in the given downs, and also held Tech High three times. In the third and fourth quarters the Junior Smithies only scored two touchdowns, one in each quarter. G. M. A. tried several forward passes, but they were all intercepted. Their formations for forward passes are similar to the ones made by Tech High last year.

Despite the large score, the game was interesting throughout. Interest seldom lagging. Spectacular and runs and great line plunges held the spectators' attention all times.

Both the G. M. A. and Tech High bands were out in full force and enlivened the game throughout with selections from the music of war and their school battle hymns. A good crowd was out.

The line-up and summary:

G. M. A. (3). For Tech High (40). Allen J. E. Brooks. Gerkens L. C. Colcord. Jackson D. Doyle. Duranese C. Thornton. Heers E. C. Colley. Colley R. J. Fincher. Woodard Q. R. Wallace. Clayton L. H. W. Smith. Burton L. H. W. Smith. Barr (Capt.) P. H. Harlan (Capt.).

Summary—Substitutes: G. M. A. Johnson for Woodard, Bennett for Clayton, Beatty for C. Burton. Tech High: Bedell for Day, Jernigan for W. Smith, Set for Simpson, Kennen for Brooks, Green for Doyle, Bearden for Wallace, Hill for Bedell, Millard for E. Smith, Touchdown, R. Smith 2. W. Smith 2. Harlan 2. Goals after touchdowns, Fincher 4. Field goals, Clayton, Referee, Brooks (Washington and Lee), Umpire, Peacock (Georgia), Head Linesman, Sewell (Tech). Time of halves, 12 minutes.

over the goal line, being put in play on Carolina's 20-yard line. Long kicked to Tech's 30-yard line. Strupper went around right and broke through, twisting, ran 35 yards. Senter was thrown for a loss, Jones breaking through. Strupper then came back with a 12-yard run, but Tech was penalized 15 yards for holding. Hill made 6 yards and then Strupper kicked 50 yards and the ball again rolled over Carolina's goal line and was put in play on their 25-yard line.

Morrison broke through and nailed Long for a 4-yard loss on a fake kick formation and end run. Long punted to Tech's 40-yard line. On the first play, Carolina was penalized half the distance to the goal line for slugging by Boshamer, and time was called for a forward pass, Morrison to Carpenter, failed when the latter dropped the ball. Spence then dropped back on the 25-yard line and shot a field goal via the drop-kick route.

Tech 16, North Carolina 5.

Spence kicked over the goal line. Parker touched the ball as it was rolled over and ran it out 5 yards, and kicked to Tech's 35-yard line from between the lines.

Senter hit left tackle for 4. Morrison hit right tackle for 8 and first down. Hill got 4 around left and Tech was then penalized 3 yards for using his arm. Strupper then circled Carolina's right end for 15 yards, putting the ball on their 14-yard line. Senter failed to gain, but Mathias, aided by Fincher, interference, ran 20 yards for a touchdown and Jim Pears, inserted in the game, kicked goal.

Spence kicked over the goal line and the ball was put in play on Carolina's 25-yard line. A forward pass failed. McDonald made 3 yards around right end. Long then punted to North Carolina's 45-yard line.

Gore hit left tackle for 7 yards. Morrison duplicated with 5. He got first down on the next tackle smash. Mathias got 8 around left end. A forward pass, Morrison to Gardner, was forced for 15 yards, putting the ball on Carolina's 17-yard line.

Morrison hit right tackle for 3 yards. Mathias failed to gain and a forward pass also failed, the ball going on the next play on Carolina's 20-yard line.

Two forward passes by North Carolina failed and the game ended, and the Tech rooters rushed on the field and carried their team off the field.

G. M. C. WILL PLAY DARLINGTON ELEVEN

Milledgeville, Ga., October 28.—(Special.)—Milledgeville read what the home fans ask for the Darlington team and think they are right. Win or lose today's game with Riverdale, G. M. C. would like to have a mix-up with the Rogers team. Coach Madison could accept their proposition to play a game in Atlanta with them on November 10, it being too close to the Jordan engagement. There is a chance perhaps of a game being arranged between the two on the 8th or 10th in Milledgeville, and such a proposition will probably be made. "The more the merrier."

Should Pretty Stenographers be Caged?

Just Why the Cruel Suggestion Has Been Received Everywhere by the Subjects Themselves with a Resounding

"NO!"

THIS is in partial vindication of the mature man, the prosperity of whose business permits him to employ a sweet girl stenographer. He has protested variously that he is not a designing villain, forcing his odious attentions on her and so persecuting her from day to day that a wire cage, as suggested by Mrs. Charlotte Smith of Boston, would be a most grateful refuge. And the stenographer, herself, vehemently objects to the cage idea; and, though she has no complaint to make against him, says if cage there must be, why let him be the occupant. But as a matter of fact, there is no reason, outside of Mrs. Smith's mysterious perception, why there should be any cage at all. "You can't make a monkey of me!" says the stenographer.

Mrs. Smith, as you know, made her remarkable statement before a meeting of the Women's Homestead Association in Boston, and Mrs. Frank W. Page, who followed her on the platform, averred that if wives gave their husbands more affection no wire cages would be needed.

But would a wire cage solve the problem such as that which the gentle stenographer has confronted the country? Stone walls and iron bars make no prison where Cupid is concerned. And while the baby has the wisdom of a baldhead a wire cage is simply a joke. Still, it must be admitted that it conserves a certain idea of propriety. It will permit the tyrannous wooer, in the moments of blushing bafflement, to quote that breezy familiar: "Back to your cage!"

The Candy Lure.

Of course, Mrs. Smith may have had certain definite corroboration in view when she launched her denunciation, which, having been discussed in every city on the continent where the girl stenographer is an accepted factor in the big business machine, has justification in being here repeated.

"Just as soon as the stenographer enters the office the employer catches her, draws out a box of candy and gets nearer. A young girl can't do anything but bear it. Many a girl is afraid on account of her position. These old sinners take advantage of it. It's got to stop. I would have a law passed that no man can have a female stenographer in his office without a wire cage surrounding her.

This, you must realize, is a tremendous evil if generally true, applying as it does to hundreds of thousands of employers—the heavily hirsute as well as the baldly bald—and the wage-earning girl. And if it is true that one swallow does not make the spring, it can be accepted with the same degree of certainty that one case that needed the wire-cage cure does not establish the truth for the vast army of others.

Stenographic "Soul Mates."

Mrs. Smith probably had in mind the "soul mate" case of Seth B. MacClinton, ventilated in the courts just a month before she spoke. But when you hear what Seth says you will realize just what an entirely useless and inefficient thing a wire cage would prove in cases, especially where the man was not a bald-headed "old sinner."

Miss Stella Janover, Who Says That Men Are Not Likely to Spoil Ability by a Flirtation.

Miss Mabelle Burke, Who Says That No Girl Who Attends to Business Is Likely to Find Herself in Need of a Wire Cage.

MacClinton is the official stenographer for a big reporting concern in New York and one of the leading members of the state organization of stenographers. His wife, suing him for separation, brought evidence to show that he cared more for another woman than he did for her. That woman was an "uncaged" stenographer. After Seth and his wife separated he was found very much in the company of Edna Morton, whom he met in 1912 and who entered his employ a year later.

Edna is a proficient operator and her employment was a good business move. It is not told whether Seth ever produced a box of chocolates and moved his chair nearer to hers; but it is a matter of cold court record that he owned up with amazing frankness to his wife in a statement:

"I desire to make this final statement of my position, and say, also, that I have Mrs. Morton's permission to say is here. We refuse absolutely to change present status of the matter unless some substitute is offered that will affect relations in the future between us protected by law. We are willing, however, to conform to all possible conventions, safeguarded in whatever way you deem best."

He will submit to no final separation of any kind, whether a divorce, annulment or not. We have carefully considered the future, and as a possible result of the age of childhood we feel that we can best judge whether or not happiness lies in that direction. "Finally, I have tried to be frank in all things. Mrs. MacClinton has been told that if she refuses to get a divorce I will do all in my power to make her life happy to a greater extent than in the past. I have also stated to her in as delicate a way as possible that a resumption of marital relations between us was impossible, and to ask me to offend Mrs. Morton was something I would not accede to."

Of course, the wire cage in such a case would have been an unnecessary expense. And here, it would be well to ask Mrs. Smith who is expected to bear the expense of this protective innovation? For obviously the "old sinners" would be firmly set against it. The persecuted stenographer, on the other hand, much as she might desire it, would have neither the money nor the permission for its erection.

Who'll Build It?

The only one direction in which to turn in such a dilemma—to the wives of the flirtatious business men. Those who hold to the view of Mrs. Smith, no doubt, would willingly bear the expense of the cages and gladly volunteer to act as trainers in the office zoo.

Miss Mabelle Burke, who holds a responsible position in one of the largest business concerns in the country and has acted as office manager and confidential secretary, says the type of employer cited by Mrs. Smith is entirely familiar to her. "I've seen him in the moving pictures and in the 'Tensie the Typewriter' form of melodrama—but mostly in the pictures. He is a terror, and if the girl does not go to luncheon with him and unclashes her hand away when he takes hold of it, why she is fired. Just like that!"

"The stenographer in the pictures is always in some persecuted fashion. They simply cannot let her alone. It is not Mrs. Smith's bald-headed old sinner, it is the thiefish cashier who is about to run away; a scapegrace brother or a prodigal father. But the bald-headed boss is the favorite theme. I have seen six of him on the screen during the past year—and I am not a movie fan at that.

Maligned by the Movies.

"In this manner thousands of persons who have no idea of the actual conditions under which the wage-earning woman works believe that here is expressed the actual truth of the matter. Only the grossest ignorance of general conditions and the average environment of the woman stenographer could be responsible for the utterances of Mrs. Smith, to whom I concede the best of intentions, but who must have re-enforced with the moving picture exaggerations any rare cases that she had in mind."

"No girl who attends strictly to her work will find herself in need of the hypothetical wire-cage aid. This rests entirely with the girl. There may be girls who need cages—just as capricious birds need cages—but they are not the serious workers, not of the great majority of wage-earning women."

"And lastly, Mrs. Smith's cage idea in connection with the flirtatious queens at the keys has given rise to the characterization of these ladies among the profession as 'cage chickens,' 'barbed-wire babies,' 'Bosco beauties,' with still more to come. Mrs. Smith will not mind this little harmless fun from girls to whom the bald-headed old sinners are an amusing movie myth."

Sensible Employers.

Miss Stella Janover, a young and pretty stenographer in the employ of one of the biggest concerns in New York—a concern that numbers hundreds of men and women on its payroll—protested vehemently on the "slam" direct to the pretty stenographers the "world over." "I have found that most men during business hours want to make money. They don't care who makes it for them so long as it is made. They don't care whether it is made by a freckle-faced boy or a star beauty, and no employer wants to spoil a good stenographer or lose a good human machine for the questionable enjoyment of a flirtation.

"Any human machine," continued Miss Janover—"and that goes for the men as well as the women—who have to work for other people, do not have time to be a menace if the machines are efficiently doing what they were paid to perform. And, if it is an unusually efficient machine and wants to progress there will be more work and less opportunity to become a danger or a pest as the case may be."

The old saw of "An idle brain being the devil's workshop" applies to the type of woman who is a menace in his office. But why for a fugitive case make a general statement which is not applicable or just to the real situation. The average working day in any office is not much longer than seven hours at best. The actual working time is often cut a great deal less by interruptions and necessary delays. There isn't a man or woman worth having on a payroll who can pinch any time out of that limit to do anything excepting the actual work of the moment."

Common Sense Girl.

Miss Frances Schewing, while naively admitting that temptations doubtless exist, resorts very strongly to the much discussed problem of a young girl's ability to hold a position is a big city unless she allows her employer to make love to her. She has had a diversified training in all sorts of business since her graduation at 16, and feels that the young girl so badly treated as to be in need of a cage must be the exception not the rule.

"I have always found men courteous in business," she said. "I think the trouble that some young women have who seek employment is that they are not fitted for business; that is, when the need or desire comes to earn money without special training, or evident purpose in life, the young girl does her prettiest gown and makes her beauty the plea, not her ability. A pretty girl, without ability to hold her position—no matter how small it may be—is a great handicap to any business; and often serves as a detriment to the careers of other more earnest workers and are usually provocative of digressions in the newspapers such as is now occupying the attention of the public in the query: 'Should the stenographer be caged?'"

"I shall we blame the man for flirting if the girl brings her little flirtations and coquetry into the business arena? If she seeks work dressed as for the matinee or some social function, is it not natural that he should at once judge by the outward appearance and stamp as that type of girl with whom he can trifles?"

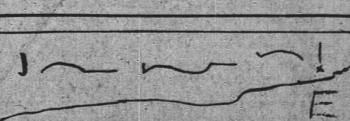

"A girl of common sense, a fair education and self-control can always repulse unwelcome attentions, and these are the characteristics the busy girl should seek."

"All hush," was the parting salley of this eager champion of the chivalry of the business man. "If the girl is too weak to resist overtures in the office, the shop, the factory, from flirtatious employers—then it must be confessed she needs to be locked in a cage, but it still remains that the blame is personal and not due to conditions."

"This Is How I Should Feel!"

DEFENSE SCORES

JURY RAIL

Judge Orders Defendant
Acquitted on Wilkinson
Notes Count and on Charge of Abstracting $15,000.

Macon, Ga., October 30.—(Special.)—The defense in the case of the United States v. M. M. Lowery, cashier of the defendant American National bank, scored two weighty points today when Judge Lambdin, in the district court, ordered that the jury acquit the defendant on the Wilkinson notes count, and on the charge of abstracting $15,000.

Friday Judge Lambdin gave a like order to the jury in regard to the abstraction of $2,000, ordering the jury to acquit Lowery on this count. A motion to quash the count regarding the Roach note was overruled and testimony to substantiate the charge was heard.

Mrs. Goodwin's Denial.

Mrs. Goodwin, whom George D. W. Pierce, Jr., claimed had been paid $2,000 by Lowery since the bank closed, today sending to Mrs. Goodwin by her wife, where that this was untrue and that she had not given any money to him at any other time.

will be able to harmonize, of which there is no sort of a guarantee yet, there will then be the second situation of a real fight between a straight prohibition action pitted against a straight-out local option struggle, as it appears now. If there are divided there is strong probability that the local option effort will come up as the real factor in the situation, and it may be that this will offer as the stabilizing factor in the situation.

GRACE GUARD

SCENARIOS (from the Scenario by GRACE GUARD)

AUTHOR of "THE LADY and the PIRATE," "JOHN RAWN," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1915 BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

EIGHTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a cupio shop that of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Grethoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She follows the trail of the secret of the broken coin.

CHAPTER LXVII.

Sachio and Michael.

The two rival capitals of these moated lands still faced one another in a conflict as yet undecided. Which were deeper in duplicity it had been difficult to say, but as to which surpassed in active measures no doubt at all remained. Count Sachio, restless and energetic, already was taking further steps to enforce his own will and that of his sovereign upon the weaker mind which purported to govern at Grethoffen.

It was at Sachio had prophesied—the sloth of Michael left him open to any proposition which came couched in fair words and which offered no disturbing changes in his own personal plans. He acceded readily enough to the proposals of the Grethoffen courier to lengthen the armistice between the two warring countries with a view to a formal and final peace. Readily enough also he admitted into his own household the architect of the forces of his hereditary enemy.

Unopposed, indeed invited, Sachio made his way much as he liked throughout the Grethoffen palace, with whose interior he was more or less familiar. It was his plan in case of any challenge to refer to the royal ruler who was his host.

He paid special attention to that apartment where he had found the partially destroyed original script whose missing half he sought. Here, minutely, patiently, like a bound running a difficult trail, he went over the place inch by inch, seeking to find some trace which would lead him to his quarry.

But success did not attend his efforts, though these he prosecuted even in those portions of the palace where so recently he and his troops had faced death when the levels were flooded by waters turned in from the castle moats. He was willing to despair, and in fact had turned away with the intention of giving up the search, when he met a subofficer of the guard who proved difficult to handle in his usual easy fashion.

"Halt! Who goes there?" challenged this guard as he saw Sachio emerge from one of the lower chambers.

"A friend!" rejoined Sachio promptly, in military formula.

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign!" came the gruff command.

"The countersign?" said Sachio. "Ah, well, my friend, now that I think of it, I have not said it given me. 'Twas my own neglect. But I am a friend of the king—'twas he who gave me permission to explore these portions of the palace. I was curious to see the operations of this system of defense by water—it was something new to me."

"That is all very well," rejoined the soldier, "but explanations of that sort are scarcely good enough."

"Take me, then, to the king himself," said Sachio.

The sheer audacity of this intruder had its effect, even upon the blunt soldier who had accented him. Sachio was taken to the presence of King Michael, and there his bold pretension proved true—Michael reprimanded publicly the officer who had done his duty, and showed his public favor to the man who was indeed a spy, although not suspected of being one.

"My dear Sachio," resumed Michael, "you see how prompt we are with our protection of our friends? Do not take it ill of us that one of our underlings has done what his superior officers or his sovereign would never think of countenancing. We trust you will accept this disclaimer."

"It was nothing, your majesty," replied the wily statesman, "and I assure your majesty the incident shall not linger in my memory. I was perhaps venturing to draw in a bumper to your majesty's good health all thought of this misunderstanding? I will drink to the health of Michael and the prosperity of his kingdom."

"Quite agreeable," exclaimed Michael; "and let us follow that with another to the final and peaceful conclusion of that unhappy misunderstanding which has heretofore divided these two kingdoms. They drink. The befuddled friends of Michael joined them in hilarity if not intelligent, at least vociferous."

"But, my good Sachio," resumed Michael after a time, "let me ask you a question. You were ever a keen eye for beauty, and a good scent on the trail of beauty itself. Tell me, then, what became of that beautiful young American who so lately was with us—and who, if you will allow me to say it, had so much to do with the late repulse of your forces? I have not seen her since that time—nor, now that I recall it, have I seen her friend, Count Frederick. They have been gone some days or hours. I cannot tell what measures their absence, whether clock or calendar, but I know she is not here, for every room of the palace has been searched for her, and she is not found."

"Your majesty," rejoined Sachio, "it is astonishing how a keen brain like your own can guess another's secrets! I also make claim to humble intelligence enough to have guessed your wishes in this matter, but I am not of no service to your majesty. I grieve to add, neither can anyone else be of service."

"What? She is dead!"

"Oh, not so bad as that. But she is gone."

"Gone—where?"

"To her own country—back to that America of which your majesty has heard her boast so freely."

CHAPTER LXVIII.

The Unknown Countries.

What now of those to whom Count Sachio had so lightly given carte blanche to oblivion? Certainly there was left behind them no trace or clue which could give a hint of the extraordinary circumstances now encompassing them. They might all of them, Kitty, Count Frederick, Michael, as well have been dead indeed and sunk at sea, so far as any hint of their fate was concerned. They had vanished from the earth. The ship that bore them had vanished from the water as well.

It was a strange and unreal country which faced Count Frederick when he found solid land under foot once more. He turned to life and its happiness only with a dull apathy, a lagging interest.

Frederick did not note that the faithful Rouleau had become separated from him in the confusion following the landing from the boat. In truth Rouleau, exhausted as he was, himself had noted but little of what had gone on. Finding himself finally left practically alone, he made off down the beach in search of food and water, while meantime Frederick was accompanied by a party of natives up the beach and into the village which served as headquarters for that portion of the island. Here he was brought before the chief.

From the look of him and his subjects, Count Frederick fancied himself to be on an island some where off the African coast.

Whether these people were friends or foes he could not tell at first, for he understood neither their language nor their gestures, but it occurred to him that whichever they might be it would not be amiss for him to impress them with a feeling of his own power. He could not tell whether or not they were familiar with the effect of firearms, but recalled all he had read of the terror inspired in savage minds by the use of such weapons. He drew from his pocket the pistol which he had carried, and looked about him for some object at which to aim.

A wild duck was floating in the lagoon not far away, and at this Count Frederick took careful aim, and fired—the extraordinary good luck to kill it outright. This feat brought out a most ludicrous activity amongst the natives. In consternation they flung themselves before him, clasped his knees, and laid their foreheads upon for countless generations trained in logic and analysis, infinitely superior to the mentality of these half brutes about him, served to force itself into some comprehension of what might almost as well have been an unspoken thought on the part of these others. The eyes of the white man kindled, the figure of the white man straightened. He knew! They were trying to tell that they had found a woman shipwrecked and cast upon this island.

Is so, who was it, who could it be? Was it she whom he sought? Was fate merely jesting with him once more, or meretriciously intending to teach him the one truth he craved?

The chief himself somewhat confirmed Count Frederick's surmise. He came now and pointed to one of the women of his own tribe, then approaching Frederick, he pulled up his sleeve and ran his hand over the white man's skin, pointing again to the woman. Plainly, a white woman had been discovered! That itself was an extraordinary occurrence here. Admiration, wonder, in part consternation, existed among these simple-minded natives.

But, obviously, they intended themselves to go to see this strange creature. The chief called to him some of his men. Count Frederick saw his opportunity in this. He placed himself at the head of the little band, and patting his pistol, held it up, as showing that he himself, owner of this powerful weapon, was the one leader fit for this errand of discovery of this strange white woman.

CHAPTER LXIX.

The Caverns.

When Kitty Gray awakened to consciousness upon the beach of a strange land whither she had made signs to Kitty which she could not fail to understand.

Yes, she saw it now—she was to suffer the most horrible of deaths, that by fire! These people either were cannibals or fiends. Perhaps they pursued for her some rite of a horrible religion. What could it matter to their victim, since the end would be the same, no matter what the reason for it?

But now they added the last touch of cruelty in their torture of her, that of delay. They did not carry her, resigned to the worst, at once to meet her fate; but on the contrary led her away and left her alone for a time, a prey to her own reflections, the victim of her own imaginations.

Only at times her strong will, her strong body, rebelled at the thought of death. Then she would cry out, "Rouleau! Rouleau!" she would exclaim, raising her hands; "Help, help! Come to me!" But more often than his name, she invoked that of another. She heard her own voice, almost without her own will, calling aloud for Count Frederick, the man so late her enemy, yet so ready and so powerful in any time of stress or danger?

"Frederick!" she murmured, again and again. "Where are you? Why do you not come?"

But to all this, only the howling derision of her captors made answer. She must, then, die! In the last moment of their caprice, or in the full time of their decision, they haled her once more forth from the hut, up to the brink of the sacrificial pit itself, where now she saw the awaking flames. Not yet wide or wild, she saw herself condemned to a gutter which could have found no favor in the eyes even of a heathen god, since she had neither done a wrong nor owed a debt of duty.

Facing this culmination of their heathen rites, she deep beneath the surface of that earth upon which, and not under which, he was born to walk.

So far as she could see, her captor had no plan save that of safety from pursuit. And she still lived—she could say so much as that, if no more!

CHAPTER LXX.

In the Bowels of the Earth.

Count Frederick and his little band of warriors did not at once arrive upon the solution of the mystery of the strange white woman. The child-like caprice of the natives led him hither and thither, to this village and to that; so that a considerable time had elapsed before at length he found himself upon the scene of the late fatal happenings, although himself at that time still ignorant alike of the occurrences and their cause. To him this was but one more savage village, one more set of difficulties, one more series of disappointments.

They brought him, guarded by his own warriors, and hence for the time safe, into the presence of the same chief who had devoted Kitty Gray so ruthlessly to the sacrifice. To Count Frederick he was only one more savage with whom he could hold no converse.

But even as he stood before the hut of the old rufian Count Frederick's eyes caught sight of something which caused his heart to leap.

It was a bit of cloth, a scrap of soiled and soiled and soiled cloth, a portion of a woman's garment. Count Frederick recognized it at once as a part of the dress skirt in which he had last seen Kitty Gray shrouded. There was no mistaking it. He knew it as well as the pattern of his own apparel.

She had been here! The mysterious white woman was Kitty Gray!

Now indeed Count Frederick of Grethoffen became the man of action. Away now with doubt and despair—and welcome again the fierce resolve of a brave man determined to live and to conquer, determined once more to achieve the dearest purpose of his life.

He caught from the post of the door which had torn it off this fragment of cloth, and held it before the gaze of the chief—before the eyes of all his men. They knew what he meant when he demanded to see the wearer of this bit of cloth. They dreaded the sight of his anger, felt back before the menace of the little steel tube, unfamiliar as it was to them. They knew that this man would kill unless he found that which he sought—the captive but now rescued from the doom of fire.

Frederick's own men fell in behind him, and a right lusty contest directly arose between these two factions or tribes, whichever they may have been. As for Frederick himself, he had not time for matters of the sort. He hurried to his hut, but fore and aft of the hut, wall after wall, hunting for the woman whom above all things he most desired to see. He did not find her. His questions brought no response.

Drawn by a horrible suspicion of the meaning of this fire built at the brink of the pit, he hurried thither to join the group of lingers there, and now by mere chance found confirmation—and found hope as well.

He saw the print of a small boot heel in the sand, other footprints just beyond—it was a trail. Yes, yes, she had been here. But the footprints ceased. The trail ended as though the maker of it had fallen into the air. Beyond, the imprint of large and misshapen feet still led.

Count Frederick now turned savagely upon these gibbering creatures about him, and the meaning of his demand was perfectly apparent to them. Threatening to throw them into the fire which they had prepared for another, he got from them shrieks of protest, much shaking of the head in denial, and much muttering on toward the forest which lay ahead. Some came to him and showed him the two lines of footprints, the one line continuing on, and pointed to the forest, although themselves not venturing to follow.

With a new and a new ret feeling a conviction that Kitty Gray still lived, he did not pause to wreak a present vengeance upon these creatures, but hurried on along the broken trail. The trail led down the side of his own hill, of savages aided him now. Not slacking speed, they pointed out where the trail ran. Now and again Count Frederick could see on the earth the signs of the woman's feet where for a time he had rested, even put down. At length, at the brink of the abyss before which Kitty Gray so recently had stood, he saw the double imprint again—where both captive and captor had stood and looked down.

The trail led on, and down, whither none could guess. Frederick of Grethoffen did not stop to guess, but plunged forward impulsively. Whoever or whatever might be this creature which had carried her off, here at least was his lair.

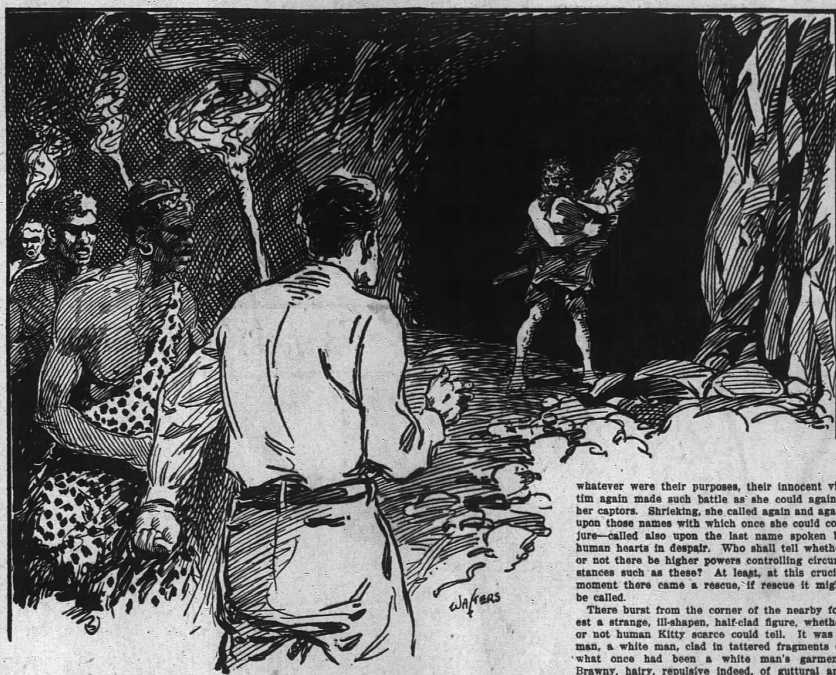

The dusty floors of the cavern, lit by the flare of such torches as they found ready for such work, still retained the record. Captor and captive had walked here. He stepped on the marks, apparently unhurt, in a vast apartment of these subterranean vaults! Beyond, the floor seemed to break off—to waste depth he could not guess. No egress at either extremity of the subterranean chamber could be seen from where he stood. The trail led thither, to where she stood—to where at her side stood also a strange misshapen figure of a man, or what had been a man.

"Man!" cried Count Frederick, high and clear, "Courage!" and sprang forward.

Now this strange creature that had brought Kitty Gray hither seemed to fancy himself about to be robbed of his captive. For one moment he stood staring at her, as though he could not believe what lay before him. Meantime, her captor turned upon her assistant a face which at least offered one conclusion.

He made no coherent speech, but his attitude spoke loudly enough. The Count Frederick halted. One step more, and the girl would be plunged into eternity.

the earth even as Man Friday had in the presence of Crusoe of old. Obviously they were disposed to carry away with him now, and not to attack him. As for himself, possessed only of such ammunition as remained in his single cartridge clip, he assumed such attitude as he fancied would best display him as a conqueror—although in truth he felt himself far from such.

They led him through the village to a place where he was offered food and water—both now imperatively craved by his starved body. Unable to understand what was desired of him, and indifferent as to the meaning of the colloquy going on about him, for some time his interest in life and its affairs was so lax that he paid no attention to anything that was happening. At length, however, he noticed something which caused him to take a sudden and eager interest in his surroundings.

Two men came running, evidently from a distant part of the island and evidently bearers of news of some importance, as could be proved by the reception given their hurried story. But what was that story?

The men had come far—no one could tell that, their looks proved it. They had seen something strange, something extraordinary had happened, some event of interest or importance had occurred, else they would not have come so fast and so far. This was easy enough to reason out.

What was that event? What could happen out of the ordinary on this desert island, unless it were something coming from beyond the narrow horizon of that island—say, a shipwreck, or the landing on these shores of some survivor such as he himself had been?

That would explain these hurried messengers. But if that were true, who or what was the survivor or the adventurer discovered in a distant part of this same land? Was it a man or woman, was it a woman or woman? What was the meaning of these excited ejaculations, these gestures, these contortions?

Guessing, rather than knowing, Count Frederick fancied that these men were telling about a woman who like himself had been cast up by the waves. The keen intensity of the white man's brain, been carried by no purpose of her own, she looked once more into the face of peril. The savages who surrounded her showed no sign of pity or kindness. Upon the contrary, whooping and yelling, they fell upon her and dragged her in spite of herself toward their own village.

This village had a ruler of its own, no doubt chief for that part of the country.

He was a savage of peculiarly fierce and forbidding visage, and Kitty felt her blood run cold as she faced his evil gaze. The natives, yelling in glee, practically cast her at his feet. Evidently they were giving to Caesar the things which they thought were Caesar's—in this case, woman, the spoils of all wars and all conquests.

The evil face of the savage monarch relaxed into a grin which made Kitty shudder.

Was woman was this now brought by chance to the presence of this ogre? Surely he had never seen her like before. Moreover, she was alone, a prisoner, helpless. The progress of reason hereabout was swift and simple, and the chief himself did not lack directness in his methods. He gave a sign to his men, and the girl was dragged away, struggling as best she might, and flung into a hut which she knew was to serve as a prison.

Here in a corner of the dark interior she cowered in terror before the apparitions conjured up by her own imagination. She had not long to wait. The chief himself came, little suspecting the resistance he was to meet—that of an enraged and despairing woman. So valiant did Kitty prove herself in repulsing his odious advances, that he was glad enough to give her up and make his way back to his hammock, leaving her to her own devices.

Outside the hut Kitty could now hear loud cries, orders, shouts, exclamations, all the sounds of a crowd gathering—for what purpose she could not guess. The meaning of this also was not long left in doubt for her. Again the door of her hut was darkened, and again the natives intruded upon her privacy. Furious hands dragged her once more before the chief.

The latter, smiling his hideous purpose of vengeance, pointed to a pile of firewood burning at the brink of a deep pit in the ground. He whatever were their purposes, their innocent victim again made such battle as she could against her captors. Shrieking, she called again and again upon those names with which once she could conjure—called also upon the last name spoken by human hearts in despair. Who shall tell whether or not there be higher powers controlling circumstances such as these? At least, at this crucial moment there came a rescue, if rescue it might be called.

There burst from the corner of the nearby forest a strange, ill-shapen, half-head figure, whether or not human Kitty scarce could tell. It was a man, a white man, clad in tattered fragments of what once had been a white man's garment. Brawny, hairy, repulsive indeed, of guttural and incoherent speech, he seemed less like white man than a wild beast. A swift conviction came to her that he was demented, that he was a lunatic—perhaps preserved from death by the very reason of his lunacy.

Whoever or whatever he was, his design now seemed so unfriendly to the victim of these savage ceremonies already in progress. Sweeping aside with blows of his great arms the savages who clustered about her, he caught Kitty up in a gorilla-like embrace, and with hoarse cries of defiance made his way with her to the cover of the woods.

The natives did not pursue them—Kitty could not tell why. Indeed, she scarce had time to reason, in this new terror for the formidable apparition which now had her in charge.

Then slowly, finding him not unfriendly, she found time to ponder and to plan. Certainly this being was, or had been, a white man. Certainly he could or once could have employed intelligible speech—might again be able to do so.

But speech of intelligible sort she did not hear. Only he bore her away to some distance, until at length she was in the cover of the forest, he set her down.

Kitty looked about her. She found herself in a situation which could liken to nothing else in all her experience. She was alone, in a cave, in a cave, even though passing close by the forest. It was, in short, the mouth of one of the vast series of caverns formed in the lava rock of what had once been a volcanic hill. Below, within, all seemed dark, cold, silent. It was a refuge though what a refuge! She was rescued—but by what a rescuer!

He beckoned to her now, and she followed him down the steep slope. Came then long stretches of dark passage, how many, how long, Kitty could not tell.

At least she lived. In spite of all her terrors, in spite of all these additional doubts, she still lived. She might have been more disposed to make some effort in her own behalf, had she not felt full upon her that strange oppression always experienced by any human being finding himself

They Pray for Deliverance From Their Terrible Bondage

Drug addicts do not become so by choice. Rare, indeed, is it when a case is brought to light where victims deliberately ensnare themselves. And rare, indeed, is there a case where victims do not desire to be relieved from the torturing drug.

Dr. Herbert E. Truax, of the Southern General Hospital, 201 Capitol avenue, Atlanta, and one of the most noted specialists in the drug addict line in the country, has made a searching investigation of this subject recently and declares that there are few, if any, victims who deliberately ensnare themselves to drugs. He says that most of these victims would gladly take treatment and be cured if they could be satisfied that they would not suffer the tortures caused by the absence of drugs.

"In all my many years of experience in treating drug addicts," says Dr. Truax, "I cannot recall at this time one victim who was addicted to drugs by choice and who did not express a desire to be cured. All of them want to be cured. They pray for deliverance from their terrible bondage. They know that they are ruining their lives by the drugs they take, and yet they cannot stop. Every one of them realizes that the failure to get these drugs means horrible suffering, and rather than suffer, they continue with their death-dealing drug."

It is true that many drug victims have had unfortunate experiences in their efforts to be cured that have been ruthlessly and cruelly looked up and the drug so desperately craved they have been taken away from them. If they were strong enough to resist the awful shock caused by the suffering, maybe they could see well, but in cases of this kind I have never yet found a person who has been various so-called cures, and who has not returned to the "knock-out" treatment, and many of these have been left in a condition of shattered health.

These unfortunate have told their stories of suffering to others until many addicts have been led to believe that to get cured means to endure suffering. Science has given the normal condition and to perfect health without any suffering whatever.

DR. HERBERT E. TRUAX.
For thirty years or more no man has been harder to redeem from their pitiable plight than the innumerable drug addicts of this country, than has Dr. Herbert E. Truax. He is a noted scientist and specialist, and comes from a famous family of physicians.

After the Harrison anti-narcotic law went into effect Dr. Truax, who is of a studious and retiring disposition, was persuaded to become identified with a great hospital where unfortunate drug victims might get and receive the best of medical and scientific knowledge.

He finally consented, and the Southern General Hospital was organized. He is now in the country has devoted more of his time to the study of the drug habit than any other physician. His father, his grandfather, and his great-grandfather were noted physicians. He is a graduate of the University of Medicine.

He has only been in the past few months, since the Harrison law went into effect, that he has become generally known. This law exposed some of the most prominent people in the South as drug addicts, and in some cases exposed the lives of a victim's family did not know of this plight. Harrison had come to the attention of Dr. Truax at the Southern General Hospital.

ONLY ONE SECRET NEW HIS SECRET

Remarkable Case of Prominent Mississippi Business Man Who Kept His Secret From All But His Druggist

One of the most interesting of the recent cases brought to light by the Harrison anti-narcotic law was that of a prominent Mississippi business man who was thoroughly cured by Dr. Truax in a short time, and who was so enthusiastic that he published the truth to the world. So carefully had he concealed the fact that he had been using morphine for almost three years that the only person who knew his secret was the druggist who sold him the morphine. He kept this secret until he left for Atlanta to take treatment, when he told his brother. When he arrived at the Southern General Hospital he was taking ten grains of morphine a day. One week later he was not taking any.

He suffered no pain whatever. In fact, he did not know when Dr. Truax ceased to give him morphine. He gained weight rapidly and when he left the hospital he was in better health than he had been for many years past. But this Mississippi man is only one of the many who have been cured.

He was a railroad conductor whose entire future depended on his work, and who was saved by Dr. Truax. When he left the hospital he was a different man. He was no longer a victim of the drug habit, but a free man. He was no longer a secret, but a public example.

He is now a free man. He is no longer a victim of the drug habit, but a free man. He is no longer a secret, but a public example.

Professional Woman Making Great Success In Local Hospital

DR. FLORENCE T. TRUAX.

Just how much a good and practical woman can accomplish in the care and relief of unfortunate addicts is amply evidenced in the case of Florence T. Truax, wife of the head of the Southern General Hospital, in this city. She is associated with her husband in his work in this institution, and is a most charming and versatile woman. She is herself a noted physician, whose professional work among women has been the cause of much favorable comment in the scientific world.

Dr. Florence Truax makes a specialty of treating women drug addicts at the hospital, and in addition to being a noted physician, she wins the confidence of all by her friendly interest in every patient.

She is now a free man. He is no longer a victim of the drug habit, but a free man. He is no longer a secret, but a public example.

LOOKS FOR, BUT SUCH THINGS ARE UNKNOWN IN AN ATLANTA HOSPITAL WHERE DRUG ADDICTS ARE BEING TREATED.

One of the most attractive and appealing things about Dr. Herbert E. Truax and his wonderful work at the Southern General Hospital, is the fact that he does not use any remarkable secret treatment for drug addicts. He has no mysterious formula which works wonders. Instead, he is a scientific man who has made deep researches along original lines and who knows thoroughly what is necessary in these cases. Each case is treated individually, and what would do for one would not do for another. People differ, and they must be treated differently. It is for this reason that the success of Dr. Truax has been so remarkable. He does not resort to such treatments as "twilight sleep" or "knock-out." These methods are similar to the locks, bars and bolts of some institutions. He does scientifically what others try to do crudely. He succeeds where they fail.

But, no matter how he does it, there is no doubt about the wonderful results he does all of this without causing the patient one minute of suffering. The Southern General Hospital is unlike most institutions where drug victims go for treatment. There are no locks, no bolts, no bars at the Southern General Hospital. Patients are taken away from them and where they are left to suffer the tortures of the damned and pray for death as a welcome relief.

But there is nothing like that at the Southern General Hospital. Patients are not restrained. They come and go as they please. There is no fear of them going out and surreptitiously getting drugs. They know they will not want them. After they have been with him a short time the craving disappears, and for the reason of this, there are no locks, no bolts, no bars at the Southern General Hospital. It is outstretched to all drug victims to relieve them from the depths of despair and to make of human wrecks healthy beings.

He is now a free man. He is no longer a victim of the drug habit, but a free man. He is no longer a secret, but a public example.

He is now a free man. He is no longer a victim of the drug habit, but a free man. He is no longer a secret, but a public example.

Doing His Share Toward Relieving Suffering Humanity

Being honest and frank, and with a ring of sincerity sounding in what you say to any about your business, is a method these days that is bringing success to many an industrial as well as professional institution. These are characteristics which stand out prominently in what Dr. Herbert E. Truax, of the Southern General Hospital, has to say about his work. He is a man who leaves his impression on you, either when in conversation with him or when reading the literature he prepares for his hospital.

DRUG HABITS WITHOUT SUFFERING

That Is What the SOUTHERN GENERAL HOSPITAL Is Doing in Atlanta

WIVES AND HUSBANDS LEARN HORRIBLE RUTHS
"Drug addicts who are not suffering from an incurable disease might just as well make up their minds to take treatment and get cured, as they are determined to stop every violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law. This is the edict which has gone forth from the revenue department in the Federal Building, and because of information furnished by the Revenue Agent D. J. Gantt, the crusade against the traffic in narcotics will be waged more vigorously than ever. Nearly every day drug victims visit the office of Mr. Gantt in the Federal Building, and beg him to issue orders allowing physicians to prescribe for them. As he does, the terrible suffering which the absence of drugs causes these victims, which he enforces, and that their only escape is to take treatment and free themselves from drug bondage."

R. J. Gilley Says They Told Him a Good Place to Be Treated for Drug Habit.
Gaining twenty-nine pounds in weight within a few weeks, and having gained twenty-nine pounds of flesh within a short time from practically a human wreck and sent back to his family and friends, where he is tilling his farm every day as sound and well as any man, the experience of R. J. Gilley, a farmer, living on Route 1, Bremen, Ga., who left the Southern General Hospital about five weeks ago. He has not forgotten his benefactors. A letter written voluntarily and received from him a few days ago, he takes occasion to thank Dr. Truax and Manager Owens for the excellent manner in which he was treated while at the hospital. He tells them that he is working in his field every day, and has gained twenty-nine pounds of flesh since he took his treatment.

COME OF THE BOYS GO TO BALL GAMES
Prominent Alabama Doctor, Who Was Cured of Drug Habit, Tells of Freedom Given Patients—Talks of His Own Case.
A medical institution, where its patients are made to feel at home—where there are no unreasonable restraints thrown around them where they are allowed to visit ball games and other places of amusement during their treatment, and yet where the patients are successfully brought back from human wrecks to full manhood and womanhood—that is the kind of institution being conducted at 201 Capitol avenue, this city, for the treatment of drug addicts—The Southern General Hospital. A few months ago Dr. J. F. Fleming, a prominent physician of Hartford, Conn., left this hospital after a short stay and a complete cure from the drug habit.

Willing for the World to Know How Their Suffering Was Ended
Mrs. J. R. Gering, of Canton, Ga., recently issued the following statement to whom it might concern: "I have been a patient of the Southern General Hospital for the morphine habit. Before Dr. Truax made an investigation of the different institutions that are in the South, I had no idea that one could be so easily relieved of this dreadful disease. I had heard stories of the great mental and physical suffering of patients in other places, in being relieved of the habit. During this treatment I have been able to be up and around at all times, and have not had to go to anything, and have got along just as well as I could. I am very grateful to Dr. Truax and Manager Owens for the treatment and a cure myself, and have heard the different stories of patients who have taken other treatments as to how they suffered. I can say with all sincerity that this is the greatest treatment I have ever heard of."

Advantage of the benefits which I received.
I have not had any desire for the drug, and am so sure of the cure that I have decided to get married, something I had wanted to do for several years, but did not want to jeopardize the interest of any girl by marrying while I was a drug addict. I most heartily endorse the methods of Dr. Truax and Manager Owens, and since so excellent results were attained in my case, I am a family physician and other physicians of my home town, or city, are recommending their patients to the same place."

Mr. Owens' investigations showed the need of a reliable home treatment, some patients, either for the lack of money or time, could not come to the hospital, and for this reason the home treatment is being more extensively used.
Treatments in the home can be administered practically without expense, and are much lower in price than the hospital treatment. They are as effective—provided the proper co-operation of the nurse. As a matter of course, home treatments are rarely so complete as those administered in the hospital, where the patient can be under the watchful eye of Dr. Truax, but, nevertheless, a number of patients are availing themselves of this form of cure for the drug habit.

AMERICANS SAVE TEMPLE OF MOSES from CURSE of HOSEA

PAPYRUS CASE for MUMMY

THE ASTONISHING DISCOVERIES OF THE ECKLEY B. COXE, JR., EXPEDITION

The Temple where Moses and the Hebrews worshiped during the period of their captivity.
Crews that will lead to the discovery of hitherto unknown races of the earth.
Traces that show that seven civilizations built upon the site of Memphis, one on top of the other.
The famous temple of Merneptah, the home of the Egyptian kings.
Some of the finest sculpture yet unearthed and 4,000 pieces of valuable jewelry and carvings.
A manufacturing plant for the making of amulets, sold by the priests as charms to superstitious Egyptians.
Evidence that Herodotus, ancient Greek historian, was not the liar modern historians have said he was.
Evidence that trade 8,000 years ago was carried on by barter, which, modern financial experts claim, is the rightful way of trading.
Evidence throwing new light on biblical history and showing that the Amorites and Hittites played unsuspectedly large parts in the dead ages.

that its excavation has not been begun before?

The answer is very easy. There has been no money with which to undertake the work. It is a relatively easy matter to induce the wealthy to give up their money for charity, music, art and other visible things in their own land. But to induce a millionaire to part with tens of thousands of dollars merely because some mild-mannered and bespectacled Egyptologist is inclined to think that under the dust of some far away land lie records that may tell something of a still farther away people whom he thinks may have existed is an entirely different matter.

A very interesting example is given by the present expedition which uncovered the new temple. It not only had to pay high salaries to the members of the expedition but it also had to build a railway and install a pumping station before it could proceed with its work. Memphis is across the river from Cairo and when its power declined after the Romans occupied it it was covered for centuries after century by the overflow of the Nile and the sands of the desert. All this accumulation of years had to be removed by a railway and pumps kept going to keep the excavation holes dry before the work of the real scientists could begin. From what has already been discovered it looks as if Memphis, like Troy, will be found to be a seven-story city with one civilization literally building on the ruins of its predecessor.

Egyptian history shows that in the time of Seti I the foremost city in the world was Memphis. It was not only a royal city, the home of Egyptian kings, but it was the center of the commerce of the world of that day.

It stretched along the Nile for a distance of eight miles and extended inland four miles. From the boom of the Nile its commerce extended to the Mediterranean and it tapped the long caravan trails of the Babylonian territory. After the conquest of Alexander Thebes eclipsed it in prestige for a time and at other times it was overshadowed by cities nearer Ethiopia. Nevertheless Memphis is as much Egypt as London is England. When the Romans came, however, Memphis began its permanent decline. Alexandria and other newer cities took its trade. Its ruin was completed by the Moslem conquest. Of recent years it had been in existence thousands of years before the dawn of recorded history, for even at the time of King Menes the Egyptians had advanced far in civilization. Many scientists believe that the city was founded far in the dim past by races of whom not even a trace has been left. That the present excavations in the newly found temple will reveal something about these ancient and unknown races is the hope and expectation of every modern Egyptologist.

One thing about the Egyptians that makes the people of today love them is that they were historians. Their priests not only officiated at the mystic services but they were professional men in other lines besides. They were doctors, surgeons, lawmakers, astronomers, scientists and historians as well as the voice of the gods. They had a complete monopoly on all the learning of the time and being natural born historians they put all they knew down in writing and in the great libraries headquarters and in the great libraries which were established in this city were stored all the records of their learning.

In their own day these records were not known as history but as "the mysteries" and they were only imparted to a select few. When the famous Greek scholar and philosopher, Pythagoras, visited Memphis his renown was so great that it caused the priests of Memphis to open their mysteries to him. But this visit took place only six centuries before Christ and more than seven centuries before the temple of Seti I or Merneptah was built—a comparatively late day in Egyptian history.

If this famous temple gives promise of containing all these ancient records how is it, nearly every one has asked,

PAINTED MUMMY CASE and COVER and MUMMY, 12TH DYNASTY.

LITTLE did the prophet Hosea realize when three thousand years ago he thundered dire words of destruction at the Israelites for their sins and idolatry that an American expedition with pumps and a railway would bring to the light of the sun again the city, the buildings and the people which he had divined were doomed to destruction. "For, lo, they are gone because of destruction," he cried prophetically. "Egypt shall gather them up, Memphis shall bury them; the pleasant places for their silver, nettles shall possess them; thorns shall be in their tabernacles." It all came about just as Hosea predicted. Memphis, the grand old city of the world, once the capital of the world, the richest and proudest and wickedest city of the ancient Egyptian empire, certainly was destroyed. The palaces, the temples, the silver and other riches of the capital were buried under layer after layer of the mud of the overflowing Nile and the hot sands of the desert. The tabernacles were not only filled with nettles and thorns, but were buried scores of feet deep in the waste of ages.

this once proud city has served only as a stone quarry.

The present expedition devoted the first few months of its work to the burial grounds of the old Egyptian kings near the pyramids of Gizeh. Then work was begun to find the palace of the kings of Memphis. The time was ripe for such a tremendous and ambitious undertaking. The British government had canceled the German and Austrian concessions and this left a large number of experienced and skillful workmen unemployed. The expedition had little difficulty in getting the number of men needed which in the end amounted to 180.

The first work of the expedition was to dig a test trench at an old Roman wall. The site of the operation resembled a sand dune backed by a grove of palm trees. Some years before another Egyptologist, Prof. Petrie, had worked in this vicinity, but although his trenches were dug everywhere he had merely scratched the surface.

It did not take long to discover that the spot for the beginning of the excavations had been well chosen. Very soon in the operations a wall of such dimensions was discovered that Fisher, who himself is an architect, felt sure it was part of the palace which he was seeking.

Near the old Roman wall he had also noted two columns which had been uncovered by Prof. Petrie and they were of sufficient size to indicate that they belonged to some large building, so he set his men to unearthing them. The result was not the discovery of the royal palace he was seeking, but of the temple of Seti I or Merneptah.

The difficulties of the work multiplied the farther he went below the surface. The railroad had to be built to haul away the great amount of earth he was taking out. Then at a certain depth the seepage of the Nile began to be encountered. It made necessary the installation of the pumping system to drain the chambers opened by his excavators.

Despite the tremendous difficulties he kept on until he had uncovered a large part of the temple. He kept his men at work until June and then told them off until the fall season, for Egyptians will not work in the heat of the summer. In the short time he had been at work he took out no less than 4,000 articles. Most of them were small objects like scarabs, amulets and stone jars. Among the larger objects are sandstone statues which are said to be some of the finest sculpture found in Egypt. In this respect the temple promises finds of sculpture of the first magnitude when excavations are resumed this fall.

Another interesting find was the discovery of a manufacturing plant within the temple. There were many molds for making amulets and the like which showed that when it was necessary the priests could become good business men and appreciated the profits that they could make out of visitors to the temple.

The excavators made a discovery when they turned up no less than 100 human heads of various sizes, mostly in terra cotta. The types range from pure Egyptian to Ethiopian and show that Memphis was inhabited by many races.

The most valuable of these heads is a life sized one of the purest and best Egyptian type in character and in workmanship. It is thought to be the portrait of the king, as a projection on top of the head indicates that originally it carried a tall headdress characteristic of royalty. The sculpture is of such a high order it is considered the find of the season.

L. W. BALDWIN APPOINTED CENTRAL'S GEN. MANAGER

Appointee Was Formerly Gen. Supt. of Southern Lines of the Illinois Central.

Savannah, Ga., October 30.—(Special.) President W. A. Winters, of the Central of Georgia railway, announced today that L. W. Baldwin, general superintendent of the southern lines of the Illinois Central, at New Orleans, had been selected to succeed the late T. S. Moise as general manager of the Central.

This announcement has been awaited with much interest by everybody connected with the Central. Officials who were in line for promotion naturally hoped that it would not be necessary to go outside of the Central's system to fill the place.

There were two vacancies, the other being that of general superintendent, caused by the sudden death last month of J. T. Johnson. The day after Mr. Johnson's death it was announced that the position of general manager had been abolished. Mr. Johnson, next in line, but he lived only five weeks. The next man to Mr. Johnson was George L. Chassey, superintendent of transportation. It is understood that he was made general manager, in addition to his duties of transportation, and the duties of the position of general manager were divided between his office and that of the general manager.

MRS. FANNIE LAWSON HAS PASSED AWAY AT EATONTON HOME

Eatonton, Ga., October 30.—(Special.) Mrs. Fannie Field Lawson, widow of the late F. F. Lawson, one of the wealthiest men in Georgia, died this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. W. Walton, of Madison, and Mrs. Anne Field Wilson, of Madison, and one brother, Captain John S. Field, of Eatonton. She was the first cousin of Mrs. W. D. Grant, of Atlanta. She was in her 80th year.

The funeral will take place Monday, November 1, at 10 o'clock, at the funeral home in the First Grove cemetery.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Evenly That It Cannot Be Discovered.

That beautiful, even shade of dark glossy hair can only be had by preserving the natural color of the hair. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. Gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and straggly, just an indication that the hair is old and needs to be renewed. Sage and Sulphur restores its appearance to a beautiful one.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic you get from any drug store. A bottle of "Wyn's Sage and Sulphur Compound" ready to use. It can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove the dandruff, scalp itching, itching, itching, itching.

Everybody uses "Wyn's Sage and Sulphur" because it darkens so naturally and evenly that the hair, when it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. After a few applications it becomes beautiful, dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

Advantages of Special Taxation for Schools Shown in Report of Superintendent Brittain

The tremendous advantages of public schools in the thirty-nine Georgia counties, which have systems of special local taxation for the support of these schools in addition to the state's appropriation, over the facilities and efficiency of schools in counties which do not have a local tax, is convincingly shown in reports which Superintendent of Education M. L. Brittain has received from the school officials of the various counties which use the local tax system.

In these thirty-nine counties the schools have gone forward rapidly, and have proven by their efficient primary work of great benefit to the state. There are in many counties systems of direct special school taxation used. Investigations by the state department of education has shown that not only is the local county tax superior to the district tax system, but that in instances the district tax is acting as a real handicap to the schools of the remainder of a county, because the district tax is preventing the establishment of a county tax system.

Besides the need of system of local county taxation in every county of the state, Superintendent Brittain points out that the constitution of Georgia does not make it as easy for the people of Georgia to help themselves in an educational way as do the constitutions of some other states, since it has been necessary for counties to get local taxation for schools only through special state legislative enactment.

City and County Schools. Another defect which the department of education believes should be remedied is the present sharply defined, and increasingly so—line of demarcation between the city and county public schools.

The experience of Georgia's thirty-nine local school tax counties, however, has shown that whatever the difficulties in the way of this, it is possible to make ready remedy at hand.

State Superintendent Brittain says: "Recently questions were sent from the state department of education in the effort to secure personal testimony from the school officials in those counties levying local school tax. There are thirty-nine of these in Georgia that no longer lean entirely upon the state but supplement the funds received by local taxation.

These leaders in Georgia are Ben Hill, Bibb, Bryan, Burke, Butts, Camden, Chatham, Coffee, Columbia, Crisp, DeKalb, Echols, Emanuel, Fulton, Glynn, Hancock, Henry, Houston, Irwin, Jasper, Jeff Davis, Jenkins, Jones, Lee, McIntosh, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Newton, Quitman, Rabun, Randolph, Richmond, Spalding, Spalding County, Telford, Tift, Walton, Wayne.

There are a large number of districts in these counties that have district taxation in addition to the state's appropriation. Of these, Superintendent Brittain, of Clinch county, expressed it, a frequently act as a positive bar and hindrance to the rest of the county in preventing it from securing the same benefit.

In the effort to find out positively which is better—the unit or the district plan—letters were sent to the thirty-nine superintendents and they were asked how long they had had county unit taxation, what rate was required, and to give their opinions as to the county unit as compared with the district plan. Without exception, the thirty-nine expressed themselves as in favor of local tax in favor of the district plan rather than by district plan.

When "They Say About It." Among the letters received by the state department of education from county school officials in counties which use the local tax system is a letter from Superintendent of Schools J. W. Bivins, Crisp county, who says that since Crisp adopted the local tax system there has never been any dissatisfaction and that now Crisp county schools are a year ahead in finances, which is a fact that county superintendents of the state, even though the state has been a year behind in its school system.

T. H. Phinazee, superintendent of Monroe county schools, says that by reason of the local school tax, which Monroe county has had for seven years, every child in the county schools has the identical advantages of the city schools and frequently they compete with the city schools in their work with the pupils of the city schools.

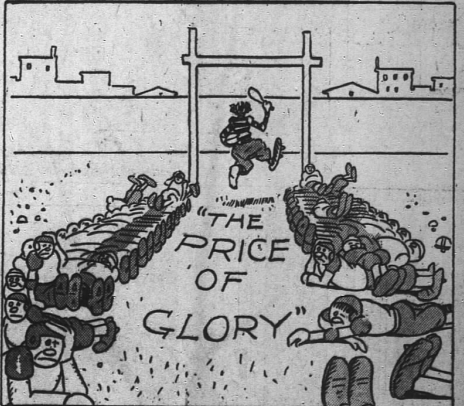

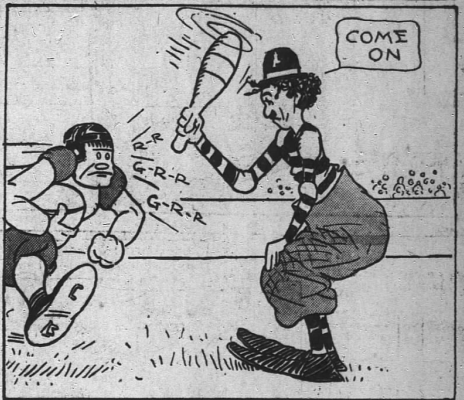

Superintendent of Burke County Schools, E. B. Green, says that in addition to the improvement in the county schools as a result of the local county tax, there has been a great increase in the number of pupils. He says that the county schools have gone up in every school community in every school district. He says that the county schools are now a year ahead in the state of the state, even though the state has been a year behind in its school system.

Since we voted taxation for the rural schools, we have gone from a one-room school to a two-room school, and from a two-room school to a three-room school, and from a three-room school to a four-room The First of the Month

—It won't be long now till Christmas, and this store is daily receiving things that are of genuine interest to gift shoppers.

M. RICH & BROS. CO.

We Will Embroider for You

Bring in your holiday gifts to be embroidered—Handkerchiefs, Linens, etc. We will embroider initials, monograms and designs to please you.

Charming, Dainty and Exclusive Underwear

Soft, satisfying, exquisite Underwear that will gladden the heart of any woman. Stocks throughout have been lately replenished and are superb in their lovely attractiveness. Gowns, Envelope Chemise, of finest nainsook, crepe de chine, Society Satin, Italian Silk, etc. Beautifully trimmed or plainer styles at prices that are in moderation.

Hand Made Gowns

A new assortment of those beautiful hand-embroidered and hand-made gowns from the Philippine Islands. Of a fine quality, very soft nainsook, full cut, with wide hems. Dainty rosebud, butterfly and scroll embroidery. Scalloped around neck and sleeves and ribbon-run.

We recommend these garments to ladies seeking underwear of as high a quality as French garments yet lower in price. French gowns of this quality and durability and style would sell at twice these prices. At $2.50 to $5.95

Hand Made Chemise

Envelope chemise of the same materials as gowns, and made by the same workmen in the Philippine Islands. An exceptionally well-cut style $2.50 to $4.95

Of Italian Silk

Envelope chemise, tailored or fancy styles, ribbon run. In white or pink. Tailored styles, $2.50. Others elaborately trimmed at $3.95 and $4.95

Italian Silk Gowns

Tailored styles with rows of entredeau at the yoke. Ribbon-run. At $7.95. Lace-trimmed gowns of the same material at $7.95 and $12.50

Envelope Chemise

Silk crepe de chine envelope chemise in flesh and white. Yoke effects of embroidered organdy and German and French Val laces. Also plainly tailored styles with hand embroidery and entredeau stitching. Prices go from $1.95 to $3.95 with and without sleeves. Trimmings are Val and shadow laces. Very splendidly made of all-silk crepe de chine in pink or white. Trimmed styles with Val and shadow laces or plainer styles with hand embroidery. At 98c to $2.50

Society Satin Underwear

Some of the most exquisite underwear we have seen this season. Of a new fabric—Society Satin—which washes better than any of the satins now being used for underwear purposes. It really lathers beautifully. Showing touches of hand-embroidery and hand-braid stitching. In white and flesh. Gowns range in price from $8.50 to $9.95. Envelope chemise are $4.95

Crepe de Chine Gowns

Silk crepe de chine gowns in the empire or V-neck styles. Some show touches of hand embroidery—others have rows of tucking or yokes of shirred net. In white or flesh. The values are $8.50. A very special purchase—$5.00 choice at Second Floor.

Demonstration of Gossard Corsets

(They Lace in Front)

BEGINNING tomorrow and continuing two weeks, Miss Gertrude King will be in our Corset Department to explain the advantages of Gossard Front-Lace Corsets.

Gossards for fall are charming—they truly form the correct foundation for your new gown or suit. Gossards have converted thousands of women to the front-lace principle—a principle which really is truly comfortable and thoroughly convenient. And the flat back—one of fashion's requisites this season—is perfectly easy to obtain in the Gossard.

The ultra-stylish models will be displayed by Miss King during these two weeks. Of course, Gossard wearers will be here—and we suggest that the woman who wishes to investigate the models of front-lace Corsets should certainly not miss it.

DECEMBER PATTERNS NOW READY

Right in Price and Quality

THE BUFFET as above pictured is one piece of a very correct new Dining Room Suite we have just received from one of our foremost Grand Rapids connections. It is a beautifully designed SPINET COLONIAL—made of high-grade mahogany with mahogany interior and finished a soft antique brown color.

The other pieces of this Suite are no less attractive than the Buffet—the Side Table is a very spacious one—the China Closet has square ends and the glass ends and doors are latticed. The table is a beautifully proportioned oval and the five Chairs and one Arm Chair are constructed to match in detail the other pieces of the Suite. Chairs may be seated in tapestry or other materials to properly harmonize with rugs, draperies, etc.

In material, construction and finish this Suite is the equal of any on our floor—and at its moderate price we predict that we will not have it many days.

Buffet $105.00
Side Table 45.00
China Cabinet 80.00
Oval Table 90.00
Five Chairs and one Arm Chair 112.50

CITY HALL

The City's Fear.
Perhaps you oft have noticed
When at the City Hall,
Among the many people
Who daily make a call,
Old women and frail children,
Who to the warden go.

They're—don't you who have with Always—Gosh's wretched Poor,
For the cry of those who suffer
Goeth up forevermore.

CITY TO INSPECT THE PLUMBING AT OGLETHORPE UNIVERSITY

The city's sanitary department has been called upon by the Oglethorpe university to inspect the plumbing of the new building. The contractor was abide by what the city has to say.

Chief Jentzen thinks this quite compliment to his department, and so it speeds the work of the contractor reputation of his plumbing inspectors.

OLD SCHOOL WELLS BEING USED TO GIVE SUPPLY OF COLD WATER

Fill-up the old school house wells the city? Never! Although an order was issued by the health department for filling of all the old wells school lots, the order will not obeyed.

is simply this: All but four of the school wells are being put to a good use. The pipes from the waterwells have been run up through the wells coils, and this gives water almost cold as if it had been iced.

GRANT PARK SIDEWALKS BEING LAID-ON THE ENTIRE EAST SIDE
The construction department is having the sidewalk pavement laid about half of the work has been done, and the balance will be rushed as fast as possible. The mudhogs along this side of the park have been an eye-sore, and the paving of sidewalk will greatly improve the look of things in that section of the city.

The question is being asked whether the city council is no longer open with prayer.

Some members of council, it is stated, may think they do not need prayer before they transact the city business.

Some time back the opening prayer were considered of importance, so every two weeks one of the prominent preachers of the city was invited to officiate. But now—well, nobody prays for the councilmen—not officially, at least.

THE PRESBYTERIAN BELIEVE Important Conclusions Will Be Reached at Meeting of Committee in Atlanta De- cember 16.

The important committee of churches representing the interests of the Presbyterian church, north and south, which has been meeting in Pittsburgh, has adjourned its sessions there and will assemble in Atlanta December 16, to consider weighty questions affecting the development of these two branches of the church, according to the statement of Dr. J. Sproule Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and member of the committee, who returned Friday night.

This committee on church union took up for settlement no specific cases of friction between the Northern and Southern Presbyterian churches, but rather sought to establish certain principles of relationship which would be precepts by which cases might be considered and adjudicated in the courts of the church. The purpose of the committee is far-reaching in its probable effect on the future development of the Presbyterian church in America. While nothing was discussed in the meetings bearing directly on the union of all the Presbyterian churches, according to Rev. Mr. Lyons, the appointment and the work of such a committee might be considered an advance shadow of such an event.

Nothing conclusive evolved at the Pittsburgh sittings and Dr. Lyons said it is expected that mature conclusions will be agreed upon at the committee's meeting in Atlanta. He said that the general assembly of both the Northern and Southern Presbyterian churches, whose committees representing these two bodies were considered to this degree when appointed last summer.

The appointment of the committee representing the two general assemblies followed a series of collisions of interests. Many deliberations and conferences were held over cases as they have arisen during the past year, and the frequency of their occurrence. It was then determined that a committee be appointed to study the problem and to report on the principles by which any such cases should be decided in the future.

The notable committee on church union was composed of the following: Rev. J. R. Harris, moderator of the general assembly of the Northern Presbyterian church; Rev. B. W. Williams, moderator of the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church; Rev. J. S. Lyons, Atlanta, and Rev. J. H. Rogers, Birmingham, former moderator of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. H. Rogers, Birmingham, former moderator of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. H. Rogers, Birmingham, former moderator of the Presbyterian church.

ASK EMBLEM FOR STELLA GRIFFIN

Appeal Will Be Made to Gov.
Harris by Representatives of Churches.

An appeal will be made to Governor Harris for Stella Griffin, the girl accused in the famous Rusk black and white case, who was sentenced to five years in prison yesterday morning by Judge Ben Hill. Not only will attorneys for the girl and her friends co-operate in this appeal, but representatives of the city's most prominent churches and uplift organizations will give aid. Judge Hill, in administering the sentence, announced regret that he could not exert more leniency to her, but that he was forced to impose four years—the minimum sentence for the crime of perjury, for which she was convicted.

Stella Griffin, the unfortunate girl who was sentenced to five years in prison yesterday morning by Judge Ben Hill, was convicted on the confession of the convicted girl who testified in an appeal for leniency, and conspiracy against George Rusk, a prominent business man, who was killed by a bullet from the hand of Rusk and Garrett.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY SENIOR CLASS OF DENTAL COLLEGE

The senior class of the Atlanta Dental college elected officers at a meeting held in the main lecture hall Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The meeting was presided over by the dean, Dr. Claude H. Harris, and the following officers were elected:

W. M. Gordon, president; C. F. Hardwick, Georgia, vice president; B. Johnston, Georgia, vice president; A. P. Varnell, Georgia, secretary; W. B. Brooks, North Carolina, treasurer; Miss Rebecca, Georgia, secretary; C. H. Jones, South Carolina, secretary.

The senior class for this year numbers eighty-four, which is one of the largest classes in the history of the college. Twelve states and Cuba are represented.

The president of the college, Dr. William Crenshaw, is presiding over the annual meeting of the National Association of Dental Faculties, which is the national association of dental colleges.
